Unit description

This unit will focus on the theoretical underpinnings of dynamic psychotherapy. It will explore the self of the therapist and how that relates to the current practice of self-psychology. The connection between presenting problems and the level of self development will form the basic building block of the unit. Students will be exposed to a number of ways of conceptualising aspects of self and a range of therapeutic interventions to strengthen the self and thus impact on the presenting problem. Integrating these tools with other therapeutic modalities will form an important part of the unit. Students will be encouraged to focus on aspects of the client-therapist relationship as a fundamental base for becoming effective therapeutic practitioners.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Develop new awareness of self that the therapist takes into therapy through reference to attachment theory.

Demonstrate skills in assessment of the level of self development from a Self Psychology perspective.

Demonstrate skills in establishing and repairing the therapeutic alliance in conducting sessions with clients.

Demonstrate skills in strengthening the self in sessions with clients from a Self Psychological perspectives.

Develop a beginning integration of self psychology with current ways of working with clients.

Assess personal performance in demonstrating the above skills.

Critically reflect upon readings and own experience of doing this unit

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due
Attendance and Participation	20%	Week selected by student
Critical Reflections	20%	One week after each workshop
Conceptualization	60%	30/05/14

Attendance and Participation

Due: Week selected by student

Weighting: 20%

The nature of this professional course requires that you attend all unit sessions, as it will be difficult to successfully complete the unit without such a rigorous requirement. Because of the nature of the training, missed sessions cannot be adequately compensated through the usual ways of reading and discussion with a fellow student who attended the session. This requirement is in line with the professional expectation and commitment that you attend all sessions that you schedule for your clients and other work responsibilities. If there are exceptional circumstances where a session must be missed, this will need to be arranged with your lecturer in advance. Failure to do so implies a lack of professionalism and thus your overall performance in the unit. Missed sessions may require additional work, to be arranged with your lecturer. Failure to attend at least 80 percent of your classes, which is the university's minimum standard, will mean that you have not fulfilled all of the requirements of the unit and will thus be unable to pass the unit at an acceptable standard.

Leading Class Discussion: Select two of the starred readings and lead the class in a critical discussion of the reading. This will mean that you should find one or two discussion starters in the reading that may be controversial statements or questions and ask the class to reflect on the issues raised in this manner. Facilitate the discussion by encouraging responses from the class, responding if appropriate or facilitating other responses from other class members.

Length: 20 Minutes

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate skills in strengthening the self in sessions with clients from a Self Psychological perspectives.
- Develop a beginning integration of self psychology with current ways of working with clients.
- Assess personal performance in demonstrating the above skills.
- Critically reflect upon readings and own experience of doing this unit

Critical Reflections

Due: One week after each workshop

Weighting: 20%

For this assessment, you will need to hand in about two pages for each workshop where you reflect on a number of things: a) Your reading, reflections on workshops, and how you may integrate this material into your own way of working. b) Your self progress towards the goal of becoming an effective therapist who can adequately deal with the therapeutic alliance with your client in a way that creates change. Thus, you should provide meaningful comment on the challenges that you wish to give yourself in this unit and note your progress towards meeting these challenges in your interactions with family, friends and with clients if you have clients at this stage.

Length: 500 words/2-3 pages

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Develop new awareness of self that the therapist takes into therapy through reference to attachment theory.
- Demonstrate skills in assessment of the level of self development from a Self Psychology perspective.
- Demonstrate skills in establishing and repairing the therapeutic alliance in conducting sessions with clients.
- Demonstrate skills in strengthening the self in sessions with clients from a Self Psychological perspectives.
- Develop a beginning integration of self psychology with current ways of working with clients.
- Assess personal performance in demonstrating the above skills.
- Critically reflect upon readings and own experience of doing this unit

Conceptualization

Due: 30/05/14

Weighting: 60%

Present a client that you are currently working with or have worked with in the past, and conceptualise the case from a self psychological perspective. Describe the level of self development, type of affect regulation, selfobject functioning and organizing principles that are present in the client. Relate these aspects to the presenting problem. Propose ways of integrating this with other models of therapy that you currently use. Develop some ways of managing this client which are informed by self psychology. Critically evaluate your work and comment on any new learning that emerges from this project with your client.

Length: 2000-2500 words

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate skills in assessment of the level of self development from a Self Psychology perspective.
- Demonstrate skills in establishing and repairing the therapeutic alliance in conducting sessions with clients.
- Develop a beginning integration of self psychology with current ways of working with clients.
- Assess personal performance in demonstrating the above skills.
- Critically reflect upon readings and own experience of doing this unit
