Unit description

This unit explores the issues that impact on media policy in different regions/countries of the world. It aims to impart an understanding of how modes of governance, cultural contexts and media flows particularly dictate policy, shaping communication flows. Students are expected to bring their previous knowledge in media, international communication and cultural studies units to the exploration of policy issues in a context of their choice. The assessment includes a portfolio and an analytical study drawing from their learning throughout the three years of undergraduate study.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.

Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.

Evaluate the issues that impact on media policy and their influences on communication work environments in different regions.

Evaluate and appraise media policy issues in historical/sociological and political contexts and identify causal relationships by applying discipline knowledge and analytical skills

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due
Presentation	20%	Beginning week 3
Class test in Week 7 tutorial	30%	8pm-9pm, 26 Aug, 2014
Research essay	40%	5pm, 7 Oct, 2014
Class participation	10%	Week 2 onwards

Presentation

Due: Beginning week 3

Weighting: 20%

Students will explore the concepts dealt with in the week's readings in the context of the two countries that they choose to explore the media policies of. (The choice of countries will have to be made based on the tables posted on ilearn). For example, if a student has decided to explore the media/communication environments in say, India and Tuvalu in the Pacific Islands throughout the semester and chooses to present on week 3, she/he will have to deal with the effects of the end of Cold War on and shifts in policy in these two countries.

Marking rubrics will be available on ilearn. Grading The following marking criteria will be used:

1. Content, both relating to the issue dealt with in the week and the countries of choice
2. Original research: contemporary media content analysed
3. Manner of presentation: creative delivery, clear expression, performance in allotted time
4. Methods to involve class participation, grammar, spelling and citation in slides.

Failure to present on an agreed date will result in a 'F' grade unless special consideration has been applied for prior to date of presentation with supporting documentation and according to University guidelines and granted by the tutor/convenor.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.

- Evaluate the issues that impact on media policy and their influences on communication work environments in different regions.

Class test in Week 7 tutorial

Due: 8pm-9pm, 26 Aug, 2014

Weighting: 30%

This is to ensure that the concepts dealt with in the readings and the lectures have been understood and students are able to apply it in the context of the countries they choose to analyse the media policies of. Students will be expected to define, explain and critique theories and concepts, including the ones in Week 7 readings and lectures. Emphasis is on testing understanding and not memory. More details will be posted on ilearn on the format of the test. The test will be held in the tutorial time. No presentations will be scheduled in Week 7.

Missing the test would mean failure to complete an assessment and result in 'F' grade. In case of unavoidable circumstances, students will have to apply for special consideration according to university guidelines. As a rule, repeat tests will not be allowed and students are not encouraged to switch times and tutorials in this week.

Comprehensive answers that cover all aspects, appropriate examples, clear understanding of concepts, good grammar and spelling will be required.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Evaluate and appraise media policy issues in historical/sociological and political contexts and identify causal relationships by applying discipline knowledge and analytical skills

Research essay

Due: 5pm, 7 Oct, 2014

Weighting: 40%

In not more than 2500 words, students will explore the media/communication policy in the two countries that they choose to study at the beginning of the semester. The essay will contain an exploration of the concepts learnt in the unit in the context of the two countries and consequences thereof. The research essay must be constructed and presented in an academic format (arguments within a theoretical framework and references). More details on ilearn.

Research essay is to reflect critical understanding and reading and incorporate concepts beyond those used in the presentation. A marking rubrics will be uploaded to ilearn. The essay will be graded using the following criteria:

1. Argument and substantiation: clear understanding of the concepts, original research, appropriate citation and examples
2. Coherence and organisation: precision and interconnectedness of theory, concept and analysis
3. Style and grammar: Clarity in expression without spelling mistakes and grammatical errors.

Late submission will involve a penalty of 2 per cent per day, including weekend and holidays, unless prior approval is sought through special consideration applied for with supporting documentation and according to University requirements.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Evaluate the issues that impact on media policy and their influences on communication work environments in different regions.
- Evaluate and appraise media policy issues in historical/sociological and political contexts and identify causal relationships by applying discipline knowledge and analytical skills

Class participation

Due: Week 2 onwards

Weighting: 10%

Students in the class are expected to not only listen to the presentations but also participate in discussions. They may compare the scenario in the respective countries that they have chosen to study. Marks for participation will be decided based on meaningful contributions to class discussions that reflects reading and research. Marks cannot be claimed for mere attendance. To be able to effectively participate in class discussions students are expected to attend 80 per cent of the tutorials. Absence from more than 3 classes has to be supported by documentation handed over to the Tutor not later than a week from date of absence.

Class participation will be graded based on consistent critical engagement with fellow students relating to the content.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.

- Evaluate the issues that impact on media policy and their influences on communication work environments in different regions.

Graduate Capabilities

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Evaluate the issues that impact on media policy and their influences on communication work environments in different regions.
- Evaluate and appraise media policy issues in historical/sociological and political contexts and identify causal relationships by applying discipline knowledge and analytical skills

Assessment task

Commitment to Continuous Learning

Our graduates will have enquiring minds and a literate curiosity which will lead them to pursue knowledge for its own sake. They will continue to pursue learning in their careers and as they participate in the world. They will be capable of reflecting on their experiences and relationships with others and the environment, learning from them, and growing - personally, professionally and socially.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.

Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

We want our graduates to be capable of reasoning, questioning and analysing, and to integrate and synthesise learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments; to be able to critique constraints, assumptions and limitations; to be able to think independently and systemically in relation to scholarly activity, in the workplace, and in the world. We want them to have a level of scientific and information technology literacy.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.
- Evaluate the issues that impact on media policy and their influences on communication work environments in different regions.

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.
- Evaluate the issues that impact on media policy and their influences on communication work environments in different regions.

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Synthesize knowledge of media, communication and cultural studies in order to critically reflect on communication flows in the globalised world.
- Evaluate the issues that impact on media policy and their influences on communication work environments in different regions.

Socially and Environmentally Active and Responsible

We want our graduates to be aware of and have respect for self and others; to be able to work with others as a leader and a team player; to have a sense of connectedness with others and country; and to have a sense of mutual obligation. Our graduates should be informed and active participants in moving society towards sustainability.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Analyse and debate issues relating to media policies in the context of emerging world order, besides 'international relations', 'hegemony', 'imperialism' and the socio-cultural aspects that are relevant to specific countries and regions.
