Unit description This is an exciting and innovative unit about Australian life and global societies. It also provides new and engaging ways to develop your understanding of the deep social relationships that bind us together and which, at the same time, underlie the expression of conflict and inequality. We focus in the unit on key areas of social life such as family, gender and sexuality, religion, age, crime, media, work, globalisation and social policy. We also introduce you to sociology and the sociological research process and hope to raise your interest in the social problems and questions confronting Australian society. The unit gives you valuable vocational skills that enable you to enjoy interesting and varied employment in a variety of different commercial, government and non-government positions.

The Sociological Imagination

Due: Week 2, Friday Dec 19, 2014

Weighting: 30%

Based on your reading of 'The Promise' from C. W. Mills' The Sociological Imagination, write a response of no more than 600 words to the following:

Using some examples from contemporary life, explain the distinction Mills makes between personal troubles and public issues. Do you think that people still feel trapped in the twenty-first century in the same way that Mills described in the mid-twentieth century?

This task is designed to assess your understanding of the text as well as your ability to apply the key ideas in a discussion of more contemporary examples and situations. You will need to demonstrate an understanding of Mills' concepts but you will also need to communicate your own ideas and develop your own argument. The second part of the question in particular requires you to form and explain your own opinion, having shown an appreciation for what Mills was asserting.

While you are not required to use additional sources for this task, you may find it helpful to draw on other sources to substantiate your claims and illustrate your examples (eg. you could use ABS statistics to illustrate a social trend).

Remember, there is no single 'correct' answer to this task - strong responses will demonstrate a solid understanding of Mills' ideas, include clearly explained contemporary examples and offer a well-argued position on the matter of being 'trapped'. Your response should take the form of a short essay and adhere to formal academic writing conventions, including Harvard style, in-text referencing (no footnotes).

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Have developed an understanding of a range of theoretical perspectives on social life from the 19th century to the present.
- Have developed a broad understanding of how the 'sociological imagination' can be used in thinking about social issues and trends.
- Have developed a broad understanding of research techniques, materials social science epistemology.
- Be able to read, summarise and apply essential sociological ideas to the study of contemporary life.
- Written and verbal expression allowing the synthesis and clear explanation of complex ideas.

At Home Exam

Due: Week 5, Friday Jan 23, 2015

Weighting: 40%

One week will be provided for the completion of this exam. You may use all course materials.

The questions will be posted one week before the due date.

Word limit: 1.800

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Be familiar with key sociological concepts as they are applied to the study of Australian society.
- Have developed a broad understanding of how the 'sociological imagination' can be used in thinking about social issues and trends.
- Have developed a broad understanding of research techniques, materials social science epistemology.
- Be able to read, summarise and apply essential sociological ideas to the study of contemporary life.

Weekly Topic Summary

Due: Weekly

Weighting: 30%

This task is designed to assist you to keep up with the weekly programme; listening to the lectures and reading the material provided. The focus is on developing effective reading and note-taking skills. Each week you will be expected to post a short review of ONE of the two lecture topics (lecture and associated readings). It is up to you which topic in the week you wish to post about. You should outline the overall ideas discussed, and identify and define key terms used.

The entry is due by Friday at the end of each week, by 5pm. Late submissions will NOT be accepted unless a medical certificate is provided. Each weekly summary is worth 6% (total assessment value is 30%).

Please submit your entry into the forum titled 'Weekly Topic Summary' located within the relevant lecture topic.

These weekly entries will help provide you with a solid basis for addressing the other assessment tasks. There will be two rounds of feedback for this assessment - end of Week 2 and end of Week 5 (grade only, no comments).

Note: You will still need to listen to both lectures each week and undertake the set readings as all topics are examinable at the end of the course.

Word limit: approx 200 words per topic. Weekly submissions required.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Be familiar with key sociological concepts as they are applied to the study of Australian society.
- Have developed an understanding of a range of theoretical perspectives on social life from the 19th century to the present.
- Have developed a broad understanding of how the 'sociological imagination' can be used in thinking about social issues and trends.
- Have developed a broad understanding of research techniques, materials social science epistemology.
- Be able to read, summarise and apply essential sociological ideas to the study of contemporary life.
- Have developed a rich understanding of contemporary Australian life.
- Written and verbal expression allowing the synthesis and clear explanation of complex ideas.
