Unit description
This unit is an in-depth study of Rome’s attempts to defend itself against a resurgent Iran in the late-third and early-fourth centuries CE. Students have the chance to study both military and diplomatic history of the two great empires, as well as religious change. Archaeological evidence is used extensively to help us to reconstruct our knowledge of Roman defensive systems.

Important Academic Dates
Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at http://students.mq.edu.au/student_admin/enrolmentguide/academicdates/

Learning Outcomes

1. Analyse and express your judgement about the history of the Roman Eastern Frontier from the 3rd-4th centuries AD in oral and written form.
2. Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.
3. Work with and respond to the views of staff and other students in the unit in both oral and written form.
4. Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule.
5. Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of an important aspect of the history of the Roman eastern frontier.

6. Demonstrate both specific and overall knowledge of the history of the Roman Eastern Frontier under exam conditions.

Delivery and Resources

Staff Contact details

The convenor and main lecturer for this unit is Dr Genevieve Young (Rm. 516, W6A, e-mail address: Genevieve.young@mq.edu.au). Dr Ross Burns will also provide some of the lectures in this unit.

Tutorial staff, consultation hours and contact details will be advised in the first lecture.

Required Unit Materials

The only compulsory book for this unit is M.H. Dodgeon & S.N.C. Lieu (eds), The Roman Eastern Frontier and the Persian Wars AD 226-363, 2nd edition, Routledge, London & New York, 1994. It is essential to purchase this book because it contains most of the material which forms the basis of tutorial questions and discussions. Weekly tutorial questions and bibliographies are available on the unit's iLearn web page.

The co-op bookshop at Macquarie has ordered some copies of this book. You may also purchase it via online book stores such as Amazon. It also worth checking http://www.abebooks.com for second hand copies. The book is also available in a kindle edition. Be very careful not to accidentally purchase Volume II which is edited by Greatrex and Lieu and covers the period from 363 - 630.

Graduate Capabilities

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

• Analyse and express your judgement about the history of the Roman Eastern Frontier from the 3rd-4th centuries AD in oral and written form.
• Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.
• Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule.
• Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of an important aspect of the history of the Roman eastern frontier.
• Demonstrate both specific and overall knowledge of the history of the Roman Eastern Frontier under exam conditions.

Assessment task

• Examination

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

• Analyse and express your judgement about the history of the Roman Eastern Frontier from the 3rd-4th centuries AD in oral and written form.
• Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.
• Work with and respond to the views of staff and other students in the unit in both oral and written form.
• Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule.

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Analyse and express your judgement about the history of the Roman Eastern Frontier from the 3rd-4th centuries AD in oral and written form.
- Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.
- Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of an important aspect of the history of the Roman eastern frontier.

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:
Learning outcomes

• Analyse and express your judgement about the history of the Roman Eastern Frontier from the 3rd-4th centuries AD in oral and written form.

Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

We want our graduates to be capable of reasoning, questioning and analysing, and to integrate and synthesise learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments; to be able to critique constraints, assumptions and limitations; to be able to think independently and systematically in relation to scholarly activity, in the workplace, and in the world. We want them to have a level of scientific and information technology literacy.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

• Analyse and express your judgement about the history of the Roman Eastern Frontier from the 3rd-4th centuries AD in oral and written form.
• Interpret written and archaeological evidence with appreciation and understanding of their context and modern interpretations of them.

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Commitment to Continuous Learning
Our graduates will have enquiring minds and a literate curiosity which will lead them to pursue knowledge for its own sake. They will continue to pursue learning in their careers and as they participate in the world. They will be capable of reflecting on their experiences and relationships with others and the environment, learning from them, and growing - personally, professionally and socially.

This graduate capability is supported by:
