Unit description
The unit is the first of two units in the Department of Anthropology’s Master of Research program that provides a foundation in core specialisations of contemporary anthropology research. The specialisations covered will vary from year to year according to contemporary developments in anthropology and the emergent interests of the department. In recent years staff interests have included psychological anthropology, ethnographic media, human-animal relationships, and religion.

Important Academic Dates
Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at http://students.mq.edu.au/student_admin/enrolmentguide/academicdates/

Learning Outcomes
1. Gain an understanding of long-standing debates surrounding fieldwork, ethnography, anthropology and representation
2. Familiarise themselves with anthropological perspectives on embodiment, the emotions and senses.
3. Acquire insight into cutting edge anthropological concerns such as ontology and human-environment relations
4. Enhance their communication and interpersonal skills through oral discussion and written work that focuses on conveying understanding, argument and information in a clear and concise fashion

5. Cement critical analysis and creative thinking skills through research assignments.

Seminar participation

Due: Weekly
Weighting: 20%

Seminar attendance and participation are mandatory. Active engagement in our discussions is vital: please come to class well prepared, willing to contribute your ideas, and ready to listen to others' contributions.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:

- Gain an understanding of long-standing debates surrounding fieldwork, ethnography, anthropology and representation
- Familiarise themselves with anthropological perspectives on embodiment, the emotions and senses.
- Acquire insight into cutting edge anthropological concerns such as ontology and human-environment relations
- Enhance their communication and interpersonal skills through oral discussion and written work that focuses on conveying understanding, argument and information in a clear and concise fashion

Report on discussion

Due: One week after discussion
Weighting: 30%

Students will be responsible for facilitating one seminar discussion over the course of the session. You should prepare for the discussion by: carefully reading the week's required and extended readings; identifying central arguments and areas of potential confusion; generating starting points for class discussion. You will assume responsibility for introducing and guiding a respectful, well-informed discussion of the weekly topic. Creativity is encouraged.

One week after the discussion you will submit a 1,000-1,200 word report on the weekly discussion topic. The report should incorporate your preparation for the discussion and any insights on the topic that came out of the discussion. Your final mark for this assessment task will incorporate both a mark for the facilitation and a mark for the written report.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:
  • Gain an understanding of long-standing debates surrounding fieldwork, ethnography, anthropology and representation
  • Familiarise themselves with anthropological perspectives on embodiment, the emotions and senses.
  • Acquire insight into cutting edge anthropological concerns such as ontology and human-environment relations
  • Enhance their communication and interpersonal skills through oral discussion and written work that focuses on conveying understanding, argument and information in a clear and concise fashion

Major essay
Due: Monday 8 June
Weighting: 50%

Students will submit a 3,000 word research essay devoted to one of the issues canvassed over the course of the session.

This Assessment Task relates to the following Learning Outcomes:
  • Cement critical analysis and creative thinking skills through research assignments.

Delivery and Resources
All required readings for this unit are available via iLearn.

iLearn login is via: https://ilearn.mq.edu.au/ Students are required to have regular access to a computer and the internet. Mobile devices alone are not sufficient. Unit Schedule
Religion and Ontology: Different Ways of Knowing?
The Anthropology of Religion has been burgeoning over the last 15 years and at the same time the word ‘ontology’ is increasingly used in conference panels and in titles of books and articles. In many ways religion and ontology are at the forefront of Anthropology but what do anthropologists mean by these categories? Classically, ontology is a major branch of philosophical study concerning the nature of being, becoming, existence, or reality, as well as the categories of being and their relations. The advent of ontology in anthropology is relatively new and as yet it does not come with a cohesive theoretical framework. At the same time, approaches to the study of what might be termed ‘religion’ also vary significantly, and the concept ‘religion’ itself is highly contested. Even when analysing many of the classic loci of the anthropology of religion – such as myth, ritual, and cosmology in small scale societies – many anthropologists avoid the term ‘religion’ altogether. Often writing instead in terms of ‘ontology’, they analyse diverse practices, especially the ways in which humans interact with and conceptualise non-humans as agents, as expressions of different modes and models of being and relatedness. This MRes unit provides an orientation to the different approaches and different analytical vocabularies used for varieties of ways of knowing within the emerging fields of ‘religion’ and ‘ontology’.
