Unit description

This unit is the second of two core anthropology units that provide a grounding in theoretical, methodological and interpretive issues that are currently being debated by anthropologists. These courses form the core of the anthropology specialisation for the MRes. The issues covered will vary from year to year according to contemporary developments in anthropology and the interests of the course convenor. Others may be more enduring, such as the theoretical issues related to kinship, to politics and power and the relation between individual and society, the “writing culture” debate, “Orientalism” and the problem of the “other,” and cultural relativism.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Students who have successfully done this unit will be able to demonstrate a significantly enhanced depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content knowledge in the field of urban studies.

Students will be able to utilize and reflect on prior knowledge and experience, of applying higher level critical thinking skills, and of integrating and synthesising learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments.

Students will be able to synthesize and analyze information from a variety of sources.

Students will be able to articulate clearly a coherent argument in written and oral form to a variety of audiences. Students will develop a high level of oral and written skills, with specialisation for the specific needs of a discipline.

Students will be ethically aware and capable of confident transformative action in relation to their and the wider community. They will have a sense of connectedness with others and have a sense of mutual obligation. They will be able to appreciate the impact of their ethnographic writing for social justice and inclusion related to national and global issues.

General Assessment Information

- Please type all essays and submit them on the due date or before.
- Extensions: any extensions must be requested in writing with valid documentation of their necessity (e.g. medical certificate). Any work that is submitted after the due date without an extension will be penalized at the standard rate of 1 percentage point per day.
- Important Note: It is a requirement that all students keep a copy of their written work. In the event of work being lost, you must be able to present a second copy. If you do not do so, no consideration can be given and all marks will be forfeited for that piece of work.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due
Major Essay	75%	Monday, November 10th.
Seminar Participation	25%	Throughout semester

Major Essay

Due: Monday, November 10th.

Weighting: 75%

This essay counts for 75% of your grade and is required to be approximately 5,000 words in length. The essay question is self-chosen in consultation with the course convenor, and can explore a range of topics covered in the course – cities and space; cities and political economy; perception of the urban environment; social activism; urban change etc etc. This essay is due on Monday, November 10th. A typed copy must be submitted to the course convenor on this date.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Students who have successfully done this unit will be able to demonstrate a significantly enhanced depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content knowledge in the field of urban studies.

- Students will be able to utilize and reflect on prior knowledge and experience, of applying higher level critical thinking skills, and of integrating and synthesising learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments.
- Students will be able to synthesize and analyze information from a variety of sources.
- Students will be able to articulate clearly a coherent argument in written and oral form to a variety of audiences. Students will develop a high level of oral and written skills, with specialisation for the specific needs of a discipline.
- Students will be ethically aware and capable of confident transformative action in relation to their and the wider community. They will have a sense of connectedness with others and have a sense of mutual obligation. They will be able to appreciate the impact of their ethnographic writing for social justice and inclusion related to national and global issues.

Seminar Participation

Due: Throughout semester

Weighting: 25%

Over the duration of the seminar, each student will give one or two brief introductions to the week's reading(s), drawing out its main themes and selecting a number of questions or puzzles for the seminar to discuss. These introductory remarks are intended merely to get the seminar rolling – students might wish to focus on something interesting, maddening or confusing about the reading for example.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Students who have successfully done this unit will be able to demonstrate a significantly enhanced depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content knowledge in the field of urban studies.
- Students will be able to utilize and reflect on prior knowledge and experience, of applying higher level critical thinking skills, and of integrating and synthesising learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments.

The ANTH 701 Convenor in 2014 is Christopher Houston, Room 605. I am available on extension 8471 and the email address is chris.houston@mq.edu.au. Please contact me about problems of any nature that affects your studies this year.

Unit Schedule

Political Economies, Activisms, & Experiences of the City

The figures are in – most people across the globe live in cities. And accordingly, most anthropological fieldwork, from the study of music pedagogy to model-plane flying clubs, is also pursued in urban contexts. Whole cities, too, may become the locus and focus of research, raising fascinating puzzles about how to study such giant and complex places. Urban anthropology is a multi-disciplinary enterprise and its practitioners need to become familiar with the primary concerns and thematics of other traditions of knowledge. Urban planning, architecture, political economy, phenomenology, social movements etc. etc. are all potential helpmates (and subjects) of anthropological research.

In this reading/discussion course we will cover a number of different perspectives grappling with the scales (both public and intimate) of urban life and existence. And we will visit, in ethnography and film, some fearsome places along the way.
