Unit description

The unit introduces the big philosophical questions about human nature, personal identity and the meaning of life. Are human beings somehow unique in nature? Do we have distinct selves that endure through time? Do we have free will? What is the relation between our identity and the things that matter to us? We take a broadly historical approach, reading the classic philosophical texts as well as contemporary work. Three themes recur across the unit: the relation of mind and body, the quest for knowledge and the nature of the self. We begin with conceptions of the mind at the dawn of the modern period, asking whether mind is entirely physical or could in principle survive bodily death. We also explore the links between the self, time, and memory. The remainder of the unit introduces some key thinkers of the twentieth century; and we explore their views on freedom, lived experience, and our relations to others. The unit as a whole offers a detailed introduction to controversial questions about the nature of the mind, showing how historical understanding animates current debates, and demonstrating the relevance of philosophy to live modern issues about science, human nature, and culture.

Important Academic Dates

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

You will understand the nature of mind and self using foundational philosophical ideas from the Early Modern period and beyond, at an introductory level.

You will understand contemporary debates about the metaphysics of personal identity, at an introductory level.

You will understand traditional and contemporary debates about the nature of the mind and consciousness.

You will possess basic skills in philosophical analysis.

You will be able to respond to some common theories of mind and personhood in a reflective and critical way.

You will be able to express your own ideas with greater clarity, and construct stronger arguments than previously.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due

Name	Weighting	Due
Final Essay	40%	13/11/2015
Online Discussions	20%	On-going

Scaffolded Essay

Due: End of Week 7

Weighting: 40%

This assignment will be to provide an analysis and response to a text by, or concerning, René Descartes (1596-1650) and the material from weeks 1-4. Your analysis will be 'scaffolded' by your answering a series of structured questions, each building on the next. This will allow you to do two things (i) understand the structure and form of a philosophy essay (ii) gauge your understanding of Descartes and the philosophical questions his work raises.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- You will understand the nature of mind and self using foundational philosophical ideas from the Early Modern period and beyond, at an introductory level.
- You will understand traditional and contemporary debates about the nature of the mind and consciousness.
- You will possess basic skills in philosophical analysis.
- You will be able to respond to some common theories of mind and personhood in a reflective and critical way.
- You will be able to express your own ideas with greater clarity, and construct stronger arguments than previously.

Final Essay

Due: 13/11/2015

Weighting: 40%

This assignment will build upon the skills you developed during your first assignment, and will require you to answer an essay question on some subsection of material covered during weeks 5-12. Your word limit will be approximately 2000 words, and you will be allowed to use material and resources beyond those deemed essential for the essay question.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- You will understand the nature of mind and self using foundational philosophical ideas from the Early Modern period and beyond, at an introductory level.
- You will understand contemporary debates about the metaphysics of personal identity, at an introductory level.

- You will understand traditional and contemporary debates about the nature of the mind and consciousness.
- You will possess basic skills in philosophical analysis.
- You will be able to respond to some common theories of mind and personhood in a reflective and critical way.
- You will be able to express your own ideas with greater clarity, and construct stronger arguments than previously.

Online Discussions

Due: On-going

Weighting: 20%

Participation in online fora will help to develop your skills in communication, collaboration, and awareness of diversity. Your participation in such discussions and activities will contribute to your overall assessment in two ways:

(i) through active involvement in online

(ii) by submitting a completed "reading sheet" for each online forum - a short set of questions relating to the reading that week.

Active involvement online is especially important and includes discussion of material, debate, presenting and defending your own arguments, collaborating in philosophical analysis, giving and receiving feedback on ideas and comments, explaining and clarifying ideas, practising of technical philosophical skills, and more. This requires you to prepare well each week - you can do this preparation by completing the "reading sheet" before you post any online contribution. The more prepared you are, the more you participate in these activities, the more likely you will do well in other assessments.

No grades are received for simply posting unreflective content - the way to do well is to prepare in advance, take part, and submit your reading sheets.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- You will understand the nature of mind and self using foundational philosophical ideas from the Early Modern period and beyond, at an introductory level.
- You will understand contemporary debates about the metaphysics of personal identity, at an introductory level.
- You will understand traditional and contemporary debates about the nature of the mind and consciousness.
- You will possess basic skills in philosophical analysis.
- You will be able to respond to some common theories of mind and personhood in a reflective and critical way.

- You will be able to express your own ideas with greater clarity, and construct stronger arguments than previously.

Delivery and Resources

Required Reading

There will be a core text to read for each tutorial and topic on the course. These will not be very long pieces, and will be made available electronically.=

Technology Used and Required

We use an iLearn website, and the Echo360 lecture recordings. Lecture notes and any other material you need will be available through the iLearn website. We recommend you have access to a reliable internet connection throughout semester.

Assignment Submission

Assignments in this course will be submitted electronically, as word documents. There is no need for a coversheet - the iLearn assignment submission (Turnitin) involves declaring your details and honesty in submitting your work. Please note, we do not accept submission by email attachment.

Extensions and Special Consideration

Requests for extensions must, normally, be made in writing before the due date. Extensions of up to 3 days can be granted by your tutor if reasonable grounds are given, and some written documentation can be produced. Work load from other units, or from employment, are not considered reasonable justification.

Requests for extensions of more than 3 days should be submitted via a Disruption to Studies Request, which is available in the ask.mq.edu.au portal. Your request should be accompanied by appropriate documentation, such as a medical certificate. Please see the Disruption to Studies policy in the list of policies at the end of this document for further details. Read the policy closely as your request may be turned down if you have not followed procedure, or if you have not submitted a request in a timely manner.

Penalties for Late Submission

Late submissions of assignments will attract a penalty proportionate to the nature and timeliness of the work. All work must be submitted within 2 weeks of the assessment due date. Outside of this time, special circumstances must be proven to have interrupted your study.
