Unit description

This unit is designed for language teachers, and focuses on internal and external social factors which influence both curriculum and classroom practice. The focus of the unit moves from consideration of individuals in a teaching–learning context, to the classroom as a site of learning and generation of a unique discourse, and then to the influence and impact of broader social and political concerns on curriculum and on all participants in the process. Factors that bring about and impede change are examined and their impact evaluated across a spectrum of learning environments. The focus is on TESOL but teachers of other languages will also find this unit relevant to their professional practice.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Identify the social parameters, inside and outside the classroom, which define learning contexts and impact on learning.

Establish the link between these social parameters and the constraints and opportunities that exist in different contexts.

Understand how teachers develop beliefs about language learning and teaching and the effect these can have on lesson planning and delivery.

Have a critical understanding of the range of approaches and methods used in TESOL, the principles underlying them and how, together with historical factors, they influence curriculum and syllabus design.

Be familiar with some of the research methods that have been used to study these processes, especially studies which focus on the analysis of classroom interaction and discourse.

Reflect on and critically analyse their own beliefs about language learning.

Be aware of the emerging impact of World Englishes in curriculum content selection, and in teachers' professional lives.

Critically evaluate language teaching materials in terms of their underlying assumptions and compatibility with teaching contexts.

Identify the stakeholders whose positions need to be considered in the introduction of a curriculum or syllabus innovation.

Foresee difficulties that might arise in curriculum and classroom innovations, and propose solutions.

Make recommendations for lesson and curriculum design in specific teaching- learning contexts.

Apply relevant theoretical models to practice in their own teaching contexts, and evaluate their effectiveness.

Consider a wide range of aspects of professional practice in the light of ethical principles, and explore ways to promote ethical and sustainable approaches to TESOL in their professional lives.

Assessment Tasks

Delivery and Resources

RATIONALE

APPL923 is a core unit for the TESOL specialisation of the MA in Applied Linguistics, and can also be taken as an elective in the General and LSP streams, and Diploma courses. In order to optimise the effectiveness of their teaching and the breadth and depth of their professional knowledge, teachers need an understanding of the micro and macro contextual forces that interact and influence the events in their classrooms. In order to implement and evaluate change at any level, they need to be able understand the roles of stakeholders and the forces that act upon them. This unit examines practice and provides theoretical bases for critical thought and action. It builds a foundation from which research may be undertaken as well as evaluated and applied. It promotes an ethical and sustainable approach to TESOL, and an awareness of its place in the contemporary world.

Teaching and Learning Strategies

This unit is taught through:

- Course notes (provided on i-learn)
- Structured reading and reflection tasks
- Web tasks and discussions

It is expected that students in this unit will

- Read the essential pre-reading before the lecture/seminars
- Attend all of the lecture/seminar sessions
- Participate in small group discussions and tasks in class
- Download and read the powerpoints after each of the lecture/seminars
- Access other readings from the unit website as well as journals and library resources.

- Consult with the lecturer about any assessment or other issues that need clarification.

NB: Distance course materials are also available to internal students. Participation in the web discussion is optional but encouraged.

NB: As the lecture/seminars involve extensive student participation, no i-lecture recordings will be made for this unit.

Required and Recommended Reading and Learning Material

There are no textbooks for this unit.

Reading material for this course consists of book chapters and some journal articles that can be found on e-reserve. Other journal articles can be accessed directly through the library catalogue. Detailed reading lists will be available on the i-learn site, which you can access from Monday Week 1. Reading guides and questions to consider are provided for the key readings.

For copyright reasons, some of the items on e-reserve may not be available for the entire period of the course. This means that students must download them when they are available and also that it is no cause for concern if readings do not appear until shortly before the corresponding module is due to commence.

Technology

i-learn will be used in the delivery of this unit. For more information: http://www.mq.edu.au/iLearn/student_info/getting_started.htm

Unit Schedule

Week	Topic
1	Defining a social context
2	Teachers' thinking/ thinking teachers
3	English in the world
4	Communicative language teaching: origins and directions after the 'post-method era'
5	Approaches to curriculum design
6	The role of teaching materials: a critical approach
7	The classroom as a complex system

8	Researching classroom discourse 1
9	Researching classroom discourse 2
10	Curriculum innovation
11	Action research and teacher initiated change
12	Innovation in teaching: technological affordances
13	Review: Teachers, professional development, research and change

See the unit i-learn site for weekly readings and tasks.

As well as the weekly topics there are general themes that go through this whole unit and provide a theoretical foundation for analysis of context as it operates at the level of individual, classroom and institution, and broad social context.

These are:

- Complexity theory, specifically the behaviour of complex adaptive systems
- Ecological linguistics
- Sociocultural theory and mediated learning
- Critical applied linguistics
- Discourse analysis
- Frameworks for the implementation of change

Learning and Teaching Activities

Structured reading tasks

All readings for this unit are available through i-learn or the library website. Learning activities include pre-reading questions, reflection tasks, and web discussions.

Lectures/seminars

On campus teaching sessions are held weekly.

In-class discussions

Students take part in class and small group discussions and activities integrated with the lecture program.

Web discussions

Web discussions provide students with opportunities to engage with their peers and consider applications of the unit content to their own professional experience and practice.

Assignment tasks

Formal assignments require the development of academic research and written communication skills

Policies and Procedures

Graduate Capabilities

PG - Capable of Professional and Personal Judgment and Initiative

Our postgraduates will demonstrate a high standard of discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgment. They will have the ability to make informed choices and decisions that reflect both the nature of their professional work and their personal perspectives.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcome

- Identify the social parameters, inside and outside the classroom, which define learning contexts and impact on learning.

Assessment tasks

- Assignment 2
- Assignment 3

Learning and teaching activities

- On campus teaching sessions are held weekly.
- Students take part in class and small group discussions and activities integrated with the lecture program.
- Web discussions provide students with opportunities to engage with their peers and consider applications of the unit content to their own professional experience and practice.

- Formal assignments require the development of academic research and written communication skills

PG - Discipline Knowledge and Skills

Our postgraduates will be able to demonstrate a significantly enhanced depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content knowledge in their chosen fields.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcome

- Identify the social parameters, inside and outside the classroom, which define learning contexts and impact on learning.
