Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due
Quantitative Methods task	20%	April 4
Research project proposal	40%	Week 12
Presentations	10%	Continuous
end of semester test	30%	Week 13

Quantitative Methods task

Due: April 4

Weighting: 20%

Translation of statistical information into explanatory text. Length 1000 words. Instructions to be supplied in week 3.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- an understanding of aims and philosophical considerations underpinning academic research
- knowledge of some different methods/methodologies in Politics and International Relations and related assumptions

Research project proposal

Due: Week 12

Weighting: 40%

This assessment task presumes that all enrolled students are intending to progress on to undertake a major research project or are currently doing so. The task entails writing up a detailed, professional research proposal of 6 to 8 pages. Write concisely and with clarity. The individual items include:

- The identification of a problem and/or a central research question that the project will pursue
- Aims (what the project strives to discover/establish/refute) contextualized against a background
- The method/s to be used and justification why it/they are appropriate
- Organization of the project (e.g. what will be done where, chapter outline, etc)
- Review of relevant literature and identification of a lacuna that your project will fill – originality aspect

-Logistical and/or budgetary issues (e.g. travel requirements, special equipment, translation costs)

-A schedule/plan

-A bibliography of works cited

On successful completion you will be able to:

- an understanding of aims and philosophical considerations underpinning academic research
- knowledge of some different methods/methodologies in Politics and International Relations and related assumptions
- practical experience in designing a research proposal
- knowledge of concepts and terminologies applied in politics and International Relations research

Presentations

Due: Continuous

Weighting: 10%

Each internal student will be expected to give a presentation of the weekly readings and lead the class discussion. Topics will be allocated in the first tutorial (in week 1). In place of this external students are to choose one of the non-textbook readings from the unit schedule and write a 700-800 word critical summary. Due: Friday June 3.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- knowledge of concepts and terminologies applied in politics and International Relations research

end of semester test

Due: Week 13

Weighting: 30%

A test of themes and material across the entire unit. The format may incorporate short answers, micro-essays or multiple choice responses and will be conducted in the seminar time. External students will have a take home exam to be sent in week 13.

Further details to be announced.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- an understanding of aims and philosophical considerations underpinning academic research

- knowledge of some different methods/methodologies in Politics and International Relations and related assumptions
- knowledge of concepts and terminologies applied in politics and International Relations research

Delivery and Resources

Lectures will be delivered employing power point and other technology (including audio via Echo) as required. Power point slides will be placed on the unit iLearn site thereafter. Lectures are on Monday 3-4pm in W5C301 followed by the seminar in W5C302 4-6pm.

The textbook for the unit is Gerry Stoker and David Marsh (eds.) Theory and Methods in Political Science (Palgrave, 2010, 3rd edition). Copies are available in the co-op bookshop. We will use this text most weeks and other readings will be made available through e-reserve.

Unit Schedule

Lectures and seminars begin on 29 February.

A unit schedule with weekly topics and readings will be made available on ilearn.

Graduate Capabilities

PG - Capable of Professional and Personal Judgment and Initiative

Our postgraduates will demonstrate a high standard of discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgment. They will have the ability to make informed choices and decisions that reflect both the nature of their professional work and their personal perspectives.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- an understanding of aims and philosophical considerations underpinning academic research
- practical experience in designing a research proposal

Assessment tasks

- Research project proposal
- end of semester test

PG - Discipline Knowledge and Skills

Our postgraduates will be able to demonstrate a significantly enhanced depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content knowledge in their chosen fields.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- an understanding of aims and philosophical considerations underpinning academic research
- knowledge of some different methods/methodologies in Politics and International Relations and related assumptions
- practical experience in designing a research proposal
- knowledge of concepts and terminologies applied in politics and International Relations research

Assessment tasks

- Quantitative Methods task
- Research project proposal
- Presentations
- end of semester test

PG - Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

Our postgraduates will be capable of utilising and reflecting on prior knowledge and experience, of applying higher level critical thinking skills, and of integrating and synthesising learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments. A characteristic of this form of thinking is the generation of new, professionally oriented knowledge through personal or group-based critique of practice and theory.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- an understanding of aims and philosophical considerations underpinning academic research
- knowledge of some different methods/methodologies in Politics and International Relations and related assumptions
- practical experience in designing a research proposal
- knowledge of concepts and terminologies applied in politics and International Relations research

Assessment tasks

- Quantitative Methods task
- Research project proposal
- Presentations
- end of semester test

PG - Research and Problem Solving Capability

Our postgraduates will be capable of systematic enquiry; able to use research skills to create new knowledge that can be applied to real world issues, or contribute to a field of study or practice to enhance society. They will be capable of creative questioning, problem finding and problem solving.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- an understanding of aims and philosophical considerations underpinning academic research
- knowledge of some different methods/methodologies in Politics and International Relations and related assumptions
