Unit description

This unit provides an introduction to Australian politics, and examines the key political institutions, ideas and interests which are important in contemporary Australia. The unit considers the state of Australia's democracy, reflecting critically on the role of key institutions such as the Constitution, the High Court, Parliament, and Federalism. It explores the role of political parties in politics and policy, and considers the strengths and weaknesses of the dominant political ideologies in contemporary Australian debates. The unit also explores the way in which Australian institutions and actors have been affected by globalisation, and examines a range of topical case studies in contemporary politics and policy.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

A sound understanding of the foundations of the Australian political system and its relationship to its global context

A working knowledge of the key features of Australia's main political institutions and the debates and controversies that surround them

Familiarity with the main political ideologies and parties that are influential in the Australian political scene

Development of an analytical vocabulary for better appreciating some of the more pressing contemporary issues in Australian politics

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due
In class quizzes X 8 (5% each)	40%	Various, unannounced dates
Main essay	45%	Monday, 9/05/2016
Tutorial participation	15%	All year

In class quizzes X 8 (5% each)

Due: Various, unannounced dates

Weighting: 40%

The quizzes will be conducted in lecture times, and will consist of five short answer questions. The dates of the quizzes will not be announced in advance, and hence internal students must attend all lectures. An absence from a quiz will mean a zero for that piece of assessment.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- A sound understanding of the foundations of the Australian political system and its relationship to its global context
- A working knowledge of the key features of Australia's main political institutions and the debates and controversies that surround them

Main essay

Due: Monday, 9/05/2016

Weighting: 45%

The main essay will be 2000 words +/- 10%, with essay topics to be distributed in week two of the unit. Late submissions without an extension will be penalised 1 mark out of 40, for each late day. Essays without an extension beyond two weeks late will not be accepted.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- A sound understanding of the foundations of the Australian political system and its relationship to its global context
- A working knowledge of the key features of Australia's main political institutions and the debates and controversies that surround them
- Familiarity with the main political ideologies and parties that are influential in the Australian political scene
- Development of an analytical vocabulary for better appreciating some of the more pressing contemporary issues in Australian politics

Tutorial participation

Due: All year

Weighting: 15%

These marks are for "participating" not merely attending. That is, in tutorials you should regularly contribute your opinions and ideas to group discussions. Students who miss more than 3 tutorials will not receive any of the 15 marks.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- A sound understanding of the foundations of the Australian political system and its relationship to its global context
- A working knowledge of the key features of Australia's main political institutions and the debates and controversies that surround them
- Familiarity with the main political ideologies and parties that are influential in the Australian political scene
- Development of an analytical vocabulary for better appreciating some of the more pressing contemporary issues in Australian politics

Delivery and Resources

Australian Politics in Global Context

Welcome to POL 101, Australian Politics in Global Context. Australian politics has undergone rapid change over the past three decades. The relative stability of the post-war era has given way to a political and social landscape of accelerated transformation. Previously taken-for-granted values are challenged, once stable institutions are destabilised, and the very idea of an Australian political community (what it is, who it encompasses, and the future directions it should take) is the subject of fierce controversy. These political tremors have been expressed most acutely in the rise of and subsequent challenges to multiculturalism, and in the neo-liberal restructuring of key Australian institutions, with an attendant growth of inequality.

In this course, we introduce Australian politics through the lens of debates about globalization and its consequences for state capacities, sovereignty and decision-making. In so doing, we examine key political institutions, ideologies and contemporary issues. We explore the ways in which they have been affected by, and have also filtered the effects of, accelerated globalization. Amongst other questions, we ask: what is globalization and how, if at all, has it blurred the boundaries between 'domestic' and 'foreign' policy issues; what is the nature of Australia's key political institutions, and do they ensure a high degree of democratic participation and accountability in a global era; what are the strengths and weaknesses of the main political ideas that inform public debate in this country, and how are they expressed in political struggle between the main parties?

In trying to answer these questions, we will provide a number of weekly readings that will be available on iLearn. To get the best out of this unit it is essential that students read, think carefully about what they are reading, and come to tutorials prepared to discuss the readings.

To do well in this unit it is imperative that students attend all lectures and all tutorials. While recordings of the lecture will be made available on iLearn, it is my experience that internal students who do not come to lectures also neglect to listen to the lectures online. So please do attend, and also participate in tutorial discussions. You will enjoy the unit much more if you do.
