Unit description

In this unit we examine systems of global governance and question whether law and other instruments of governance can protect and provide for human rights. We examine Australia's place in the international law system and discuss law, rights and institutions in relation to socio-political and economic issues including questions of self-determination, indigenous rights, sexualisty and free speech. In multidisciplinary teams students will be mentored to develop a major socio-legal reform submission addressing challenges for human rights, democracy and justice.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

1. Define and describe various conceptions of global governance, human rights and the role of law.
2. Define and describe Australia's role in the international law system.
3. Describe the historical development of human rights principles and instruments, in the context of contemporary civil and political, and economic and social rights.
4. Critique key views concerning the governance of human rights associated with indigenous rights, self-determination, sexuality, free speech and refugee rights.
5. Assess established theoretical frameworks about current responses to human rights claims, and communicate law reform and/or policy critiques effectively in written and verbal form.

6. Develop a practical law-reform project associated with a key issue in human rights governance.

General Assessment Information

Disruption of Studies

In the absence of a successful application for special consideration due to a disruption to studies, any assessment task submitted after its published deadline will not be graded and will receive a mark of zero. Applications for a Disruption to Studies are made electronically via ask.mq.edu.au and should be accompanied by supporting documentation. Students should refer to the Disruption to Studies policy for complete details of the policy and a description of the supporting documentation required.

Word Limit

Word limits will be strictly applied and work above the word limits will not be marked.

Submission of Assessments

All assessments in the unit are to be submitted electronically. Plagiarism detection software is used in this unit.

Moderation of Assessments

Detailed marking rubrics will be made available on iLearn. Markers in this unit undertake a process of 'blind marking' to establish a common marking standard and all Fail papers are double marked.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due
Participation	10%	Ongoing
Referencing Exercise	15%	Week 7
Essay	40%	Week 11
Final Assessment	35%	Week 13

Participation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 10%

Students will be required to participate in class each week and demonstrate that they have engaged with the set readings. For internal students this is the tutorial component of the course.

For external students this involves participation in the on campus sessions in September. You are judged on your contribution to class discussion and group work.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 1. Define and describe various conceptions of global governance, human rights and the role of law.
- 2. Define and describe Australia's role in the international law system.
- 3. Describe the historical development of human rights principles and instruments, in the context of contemporary civil and political, and economic and social rights.
- 4. Critique key views concerning the governance of human rights associated with indigenous rights, self-determination, sexuality, free speech and refugee rights.
- 5. Assess established theoretical frameworks about current responses to human rights claims, and communicate law reform and/or policy critiques effectively in written and verbal form.

Referencing Exercise

Due: Week 7

Weighting: 15%

Students will be required to identify appropriate sources (journal articles, books, media sources, government reports and so on) related to current debates in human rights, law and global governance, and produce an annotated bibliography.

Detailed instructions regarding this assessment task will be provided on Ilearn and outlined in the lectures/tutorials.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 4. Critique key views concerning the governance of human rights associated with indigenous rights, self-determination, sexuality, free speech and refugee rights.
- 5. Assess established theoretical frameworks about current responses to human rights claims, and communicate law reform and/or policy critiques effectively in written and verbal form.
- 6. Develop a practical law-reform project associated with a key issue in human rights governance.

Essay

Due: Week 11

Weighting: 40%

Choose a group of people who are affected by a human rights issue relevant to the course material and explain the ways in which the human rights of the vulnerable group are at risk, being threatened, or not protected in Australia.

In your essay you should identify the various international treaties that are relevant to the vulnerable groups human rights situation, include an assessment of the Australian political context, and a discussion of relevant existing national legislation. At the end of your paper you can make some recommendations about what could be done to enhance protection of the human rights of the vulnerable group. More information about the essay can be found on ilearn and will be included in the lecture material.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 1. Define and describe various conceptions of global governance, human rights and the role of law.
- 2. Define and describe Australia's role in the international law system.
- 4. Critique key views concerning the governance of human rights associated with indigenous rights, self-determination, sexuality, free speech and refugee rights.
- 5. Assess established theoretical frameworks about current responses to human rights claims, and communicate law reform and/or policy critiques effectively in written and verbal form.
- 6. Develop a practical law-reform project associated with a key issue in human rights governance.

Final Assessment

Due: Week 13

Weighting: 35%

Students will be required to demonstrate their knowledge of the material canvassed by writing three short essays.

Detailed instructions regarding the time allowed for the final assessment will be provided on ilearn and outlined in the lectures/tutorials.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 2. Define and describe Australia's role in the international law system.
- 3. Describe the historical development of human rights principles and instruments, in the context of contemporary civil and political, and economic and social rights.

Delivery and Resources

This unit requires students to attend or listen online (through Echo360) a weekly one-hour lecture. Students are also required to attend a one-hour tutorial each week.

Before attending (or listening to) the weekly live lecture, students are required to access the unit's iLearn page to review online content such as videos (of approximately one hour) and read assigned readings (available through e-reserve linked through iLearn)

Before you attend the first lecture, you should have logged onto ilearn and viewed the assigned weekly online content of approximately an hour, and read the assigned weekly reading.

On Campus sessions for external students will be held on 24 and 25 September.

Student workload, in accordance with university guidelines, is 3 hours per credit point per week (over a 15 week term), and can be estimated as follows:

24 hours - attendance of lectures and tutorials

50 hours - readings, review of online content and self-study

61 hours - assessment tasks

135 hours total

Students will be required to use a computer to interact with online research databases and web-based research tools. This unit's ilearn page will also contain additional lessons with multimedia content to facilitate learning.

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 4. Critique key views concerning the governance of human rights associated with indigenous rights, self-determination, sexuality, free speech and refugee rights.
- 5. Assess established theoretical frameworks about current responses to human rights claims, and communicate law reform and/or policy critiques effectively in written and verbal form.

- 6. Develop a practical law-reform project associated with a key issue in human rights governance.

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1. Define and describe various conceptions of global governance, human rights and the role of law.
- 3. Describe the historical development of human rights principles and instruments, in the context of contemporary civil and political, and economic and social rights.
