Unit description

This unit examines the consequences of living in a world where mediated forms of communication have replaced many forms of face-to-face communication. Through a survey of key thinkers in the sociology of media and communication you will examine questions such as: How do new media technologies impact society? How are media shaped by social structures? Is watching television a ritual activity? What kinds of community are possible via the internet? These topics are used to illustrate how key concepts in sociology – such as change, modernity, self, community, and sociability – can be applied to the study of media contexts.

Important Academic Dates

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Due
Tutorial Participation	20%	Ongoing
Reflection on Weekly Responses	20%	5pm 24.3.2016 (end of week 4)
Essay Plan	20%	10am 9.5.2016 (beg. Week 9)
Research Essay	40%	5pm 10.6.2016 (end of Week 13)

Tutorial Participation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 20%

In class response to set readings, 5 minutes max (2-3 students per week), beginning in week 5.

As well as regular, general participation in the discussion based on the weekly readings, you will participate in group work during the tutorials. This will involve structured discussion and exercises. Your overall mark for the task will reflect your preparation for tutorials, as well as your engagement with the in-class exercises.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- develop an understanding of debates about communication media and how they shape social life
- critical thinking and application of different sociological approaches, both theoretical and empirical, to the study of media and society
- Critical engagement with other students' ideas through structured discussions

Reflection on Weekly Responses

Due: 5pm 24.3.2016 (end of week 4)

Weighting: 20%

Two pages (500 words) reflection on readings for first three weeks of semester, addressing the following questions:

Q: How have sociologists understood the relationship between media and society? What are the main challenges and opportunities facing sociologists when they are trying to understand this relationship?

For further details on this assignment please see the expanded Course Notes available on the SOC 279 Ilearn site.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- develop an understanding of debates about communication media and how they shape social life
- critical thinking and application of different sociological approaches, both theoretical and empirical, to the study of media and society
- identify and discuss key terms in the sociology of the media
- Critical engagement with other students' ideas through structured discussions

Essay Plan

Due: 10am 9.5.2016 (beg. Week 9)

Weighting: 20%

Essay plan should be maximum of 500 words (2 pages) and provide a preliminary list of readings you wish to consult (not included in the word count).

This exercise is designed to give you the opportunity to develop a focused response to your chosen question and to get feedback on an outline of your approach to the essay. You may set it out as dot-points, or as a brief capsule summary of your ideas.

For further information and instructions on this assignment, please see the expanded Course Notes, available on the SOC 279 Ilearn web site.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- develop an understanding of debates about communication media and how they shape social life
- identify and discuss key terms in the sociology of the media
- research skills in the planning and construction of a major essay in the sociology of the media and competency around the construction and presentation of a cohesive argument

Research Essay

Due: 5pm 10.6.2016 (end of Week 13)

Weighting: 40%

An original research essay (2000 words) on a set topic covering themes and issues discussed in the course.

For a list of topics and marking criteria for the essay, please see the expanded Course Notes available on the SOC 279 Ilearn web site.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- develop an understanding of debates about communication media and how they shape social life
- critical thinking and application of different sociological approaches, both theoretical and empirical, to the study of media and society
- identify and discuss key terms in the sociology of the media
- research skills in the planning and construction of a major essay in the sociology of the media and competency around the construction and presentation of a cohesive argument
- Critical engagement with other students' ideas through structured discussions

Delivery and Resources

In this unit attendance at lectures and tutorials is essential for successful completion of the course.

Please consult the timetable for the latest information on lecture and tutorial times and locations.

You will need to enrol in one of the tutorial sessions.

You will also need access to the internet to access the ilearn site for SOC279.

Hard copies of the required readings will be collated in the Course Reader for SOC279 and will be available for purchase via 'Print on Demand (Student Materials)' from the Printery website.

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- critical thinking and application of different sociological approaches, both theoretical and empirical, to the study of media and society
- research skills in the planning and construction of a major essay in the sociology of the media and competency around the construction and presentation of a cohesive argument

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Reflection on Weekly Responses
- Research Essay

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- critical thinking and application of different sociological approaches, both theoretical and empirical, to the study of media and society
- Critical engagement with other students' ideas through structured discussions

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Reflection on Weekly Responses

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- develop an understanding of debates about communication media and how they shape social life
- identify and discuss key terms in the sociology of the media

Assessment tasks

- Reflection on Weekly Responses
- Research Essay

Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

We want our graduates to be capable of reasoning, questioning and analysing, and to integrate and synthesise learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments; to be able to critique constraints, assumptions and limitations; to be able to think independently and systemically in relation to scholarly activity, in the workplace, and in the world. We want them to have a level of scientific and information technology literacy.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- develop an understanding of debates about communication media and how they shape social life
- critical thinking and application of different sociological approaches, both theoretical and empirical, to the study of media and society
- research skills in the planning and construction of a major essay in the sociology of the media and competency around the construction and presentation of a cohesive argument

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Reflection on Weekly Responses
- Essay Plan
- Research Essay

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- develop an understanding of debates about communication media and how they shape social life
- critical thinking and application of different sociological approaches, both theoretical and empirical, to the study of media and society
- research skills in the planning and construction of a major essay in the sociology of the media and competency around the construction and presentation of a cohesive argument

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Reflection on Weekly Responses
- Essay Plan
- Research Essay

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- critical thinking and application of different sociological approaches, both theoretical and empirical, to the study of media and society
- research skills in the planning and construction of a major essay in the sociology of the media and competency around the construction and presentation of a cohesive argument
- Critical engagement with other students' ideas through structured discussions

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Reflection on Weekly Responses
- Essay Plan
- Research Essay

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcome

- Critical engagement with other students' ideas through structured discussions

Assessment task

- Research Essay

Course Updates

In response to student feedback, the following changes were made in 2016:

new readings were added for weeks 6 & 7;

- a new topic was added for week 7, which updates the case study approach with recent research;
- the reading reflection assignment was changed to make the word length longer and provide clearer questions to guide student responses to the set readings.

The lecturer and tutor wish to thank all students who contributed to this process for their ongoing input and thoughtful ideas.
