Unit description This unit considers development studies from two interrelated perspectives: anthropology of development, which examines theoretical approaches to development over the past 50 years, and development anthropology, which engages with contemporary practices within development programs. Importantly it explores how these two broad paradigms feed into changing approaches to donor-driven project implementation. Using case studies to illustrate the complexity of development processes, we consider how major donors and NGOs operate, gender empowerment, mobility and health vulnerability, development-induced displacement, and changing approaches to social impact mitigation.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Understand why international aid remains such a contested arena within international relations and such a problematic context for altruistic notions of help.

Learn to think critically and reflexively about recent debates informing development, the motivations behind international aid and the attendant difficulties in its delivery

Read widely and actively participate in discussions and presentations concerning the nature of interactions between development agencies and target communities within the developed and the developing world and thereby gain detailed picture of what international aid entails.

Examine the social outcomes that emerge from programs of international aid by looking beyond the rhetoric and developing an appreciation of the many background factors that influence these outcomes
