Unit description

This unit will examine the causes, processes and outcomes (success or failures) of some major post-1945 Third World revolutions. It will begin with a discussion of key theories or explanations of why revolutions occur, and the role played by various social and class forces. The case studies will focus on revolutions via mass mobilizations and/or earned struggle (Cuba, Nicaragua, Iran, Philippines), anti-colonial revolutions (Vietnam) and revolutions via the 'ballot box' (Chile). The case studies will emphasise social, political and economic factors, the role of social classes, leadership patterns, political strategies and ideologies.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- 3) To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- 4) To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change
- 5) To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Major Essay	45%	No	Week 7
Reading Critique	25%	No	Week 3
Minor Essay	30%	No	Week 10

Major Essay

Due: Week 7

Weighting: 45%

This essay, approximately 2000 words in length, provides students with the opportunity to explore a topic of interest in depth. Students should develop a considered answer to a specific question based on reading a range of sources wider than simply the key readings. (Students must read and refer to a minimum of 12 substantive sources.) A high standard essay would draw upon a wide range of resources to support a well-organized argument in response to the set question (essay questions will be provided in the Week 1 lecture). Remember, there is no necessarily 'correct' answer to each question: rather, there are arguments that are more persuasively made and intelligently constructed. Consider whether the arguments you read are logical and provide convincing evidence. The same criteria should apply to your own work.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- 3) To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions

- 4) To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change
- 5) To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Reading Critique

Due: Week 3

Weighting: 25%

Students should choose one reading (book, chapter from an edited book collection, or journal article) from the list of Further Readings provided after each week's lecture topic, or choose a suitable alternative reading. The aim is to critique and discuss the reading and the subject matter it raises. No references are required other than for the reading that is chosen. The critique should be approximately 1000 words long.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- 3) To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- 4) To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change
- 5) To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Minor Essay

Due: Week 10

Weighting: 30%

This essay, approximately 1500 words in length, deals with one of the 'important questions' listed in the Week 1 lecture notes for the course. You should refer to a minimum of 6 sources in answering your chosen question. In writing your essay, you should follow largely the same format as that for the major essay, including for referencing.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world

- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- 3) To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- 4) To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change
- 5) To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- 3) To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 3) To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- 4) To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change

Commitment to Continuous Learning

Our graduates will have enquiring minds and a literate curiosity which will lead them to pursue knowledge for its own sake. They will continue to pursue learning in their careers and as they participate in the world. They will be capable of reflecting on their experiences and relationships with others and the environment, learning from them, and growing - personally, professionally and socially.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- 4) To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- 3) To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 3) To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- 5) To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1) To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- 2) To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
