| Unit description We often think politically without being aware of it. When we say that some people in our society have not been treated justly or when we condemn violence and injustice in other societies, we are making political judgments and using political concepts. How does our sense of fairness or our compassion in cases such as these relate to our political judgments? This unit explores key political concepts such as justice, equality, democracy and the rule of the law as well as the role of morality in political judgment. We also consider the concept of ideology and examine particular ideologies including: liberalism, nationalism, conservatism and fundamentalism. Among the selected readings for this unit are the classics of political thought such as Plato, Aristotle, Machiavelli and Hobbes. |

(Internal) Group presentation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 15%

As a group prepare a class-interactive presentation based on the tutorial topic that will be allocated to you in the first tutorial. The presentation will last for the duration of the tutorial (including activities, media presentation, and class discussion)

You must integrate tutorial questions (see Unit Schedule) into your presentation, but your presentation must include more than simply posing the questions to the class. Furthermore, each member of the group must deliver an oral presentation of 5 minutes during the course of the presentation demonstrating an understanding of one of the readings or some aspect of the readings.

Your presentation should include various activities and media including:

- Class debates
- Role-plays
- Quizzes
- Video clips (not exceeding 10 minutes)

The group mark will be graded on:

- The group's demonstrated grasp of the essential readings
- Ability to keep the class engaged in serious discussion of the texts and ideas raised in them, either as a whole or in small groups (each group monitored by the presenters)
- Use of creative ideas and media as a springboard to class discussion of the texts and ideas under review

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Use discipline specific terminology to communicate concepts and ideas relevant to this unit.
- Integrate and synthesize a range of theoretical literature by giving an account of the history and relationship of key political ideas and ideologies.
- Differentiate between and critically evaluate political theories and analyse the relationship between political ideas and political action
- Interpret classic and contemporary political texts critically
- Analyse and express judgement about a range of political phenomena in oral and written form

(Externals) Short Essay 15%

Due: 5pm Friday, Week 6

Weighting: 0%

Write 750 words on the following question:

What is the paradox of democracy that Gordon Graham speaks of and do you think that he adequately resolves it?

- You will be graded on your ability to convey an understanding of Graham's argument.
- You do not need to research beyond Graham.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Use discipline specific terminology to communicate concepts and ideas relevant to this unit.
- Integrate and synthesize a range of theoretical literature by giving an account of the history and relationship of key political ideas and ideologies.
- Differentiate between and critically evaluate political theories and analyse the relationship between political ideas and political action
- Interpret classic and contemporary political texts critically
- Analyse and express judgement about a range of political phenomena in oral and written form

Class Participation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 10%

Your participation mark will be based on the quality of your contribution. The quality of your contribution is judged by the extent to which what you have to say is informed by a sound reading of the texts under discussion. Just because you say a lot does not mean that you will get a good participation mark.

External students will be marked on the quality of their posts in the online discussion.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Use discipline specific terminology to communicate concepts and ideas relevant to this unit.
- Integrate and synthesize a range of theoretical literature by giving an account of the history and relationship of key political ideas and ideologies.
- Differentiate between and critically evaluate political theories and analyse the relationship between political ideas and political action

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcome

- Differentiate between and critically evaluate political theories and analyse the relationship between political ideas and political action

Assessment task

- Final Examination

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcome

- Differentiate between and critically evaluate political theories and analyse the relationship between political ideas and political action

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:
