Unit description

Organisations are increasingly becoming involved in the mental health and wellbeing of employees. It is likely that this is a consequence of two central factors: (1) community pressure for organisations to take greater responsibility for mental health care (as is the case for physical health), and (2) ensuring performance in a competitive commercial climate. Thus, the role of organisations is extending to looking after the emotional welfare of their employees and an organisational psychologist may find the requirement to blend their knowledge of organisational behaviour with knowledge of traditional clinical psychology. This unit aims to provide masters students in organisational psychology with a basic understanding of counselling techniques, suicide-risk assessment, psychopathology and intervention strategies and their relevance to practice within organisations.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Demonstrate a working knowledge of theories and models of workplace distress

Ability to use methods of psychological investigation

Use structured interviewing for diagnostic purposes

Ability to construct interview questions

Ability to formulate hypotheses about organisational problems

Use interpersonal communication skills

Demonstrate written communication skills

Demonstrate knowledge of psychopathology and diagnostic classification systems

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Interview schedule	50%	No	30th March 2017
Treatment plan	50%	No	5:00pm 20th April 2017

Interview schedule

Due: 30th March 2017

Weighting: 50%

The role of your interview will be to determine:

- The key stressors underpinning the staff members' distress
- The core psychological problems that seem to be emerging as a consequence of these stressors

Grades will be allocated on the basis of:

1. The use of organisational and other theoretical perspectives to form the basis of hypothesis (40% of assignment grade).
2. The formulation of hypotheses based on relevant theoretical perspectives about the key issues underpinning staff member distress (20% of assignment grade)
3. Your ability to gain interviewee consent (5% of assignment grade)
4. The appropriate use of interview questions to examine your hypotheses and determine the nature of distress (e.g., psychological outcomes for staff) (35% of assignment grade).

Students are required to submit the following:

1. A 800 word summary describing your formulation of the possible core issues impacting staff member distress based on relevant research
1. A 1200 word interview schedule with comments (footnotes or otherwise) detailing the relevance of questions to your hypotheses where appropriate.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate a working knowledge of theories and models of workplace distress
- Ability to use methods of psychological investigation
- Use structured interviewing for diagnostic purposes
- Ability to construct interview questions
- Ability to formulate hypotheses about organisational problems
- Use interpersonal communication skills
- Demonstrate written communication skills
- Knowledge of legal and professional matters
- Ability to take appropriate notes and keep records

Treatment plan

Due: 5:00pm 20th April 2017

Weighting: 50%

Produce a 10 session treatment plan for the client (Karen) displayed in the vignette (see iLearn) (2000 words).

You need to:

1. Suggest a possible diagnosis of Karen and how Karen's symptoms relate to the DSM criteria for that disorder (20% assignment grade)
2. Suggest possible assessments to confirm your diagnosis and rule out alternative diagnoses (10% assignment grade)
3. Provide a 10 session treatment plan for Karen (assuming your diagnosis is correct) using recognised strategies for treating this particular problem (40% assignment grade)
4. Inclusion of homework activities and aspects of the plan that can be carried out in the workplace to assist Karen perform more effectively at work (30% assignment grade)

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate a working knowledge of theories and models of workplace distress
- Demonstrate written communication skills

- Demonstrate knowledge of psychopathology and diagnostic classification systems
- Demonstrate ability to design psychological interventions
- Ability to select appropriate mental health assessment tools
- Use the cognitive behavioural therapy model
- Knowledge of legal and professional matters
- Demonstrate knowledge of sexuality and cultural issues in the workplace
- Ability to take appropriate notes and keep records

Delivery and Resources

This unit involves five short lectures and three full-day workshops. A minimal amount of content will be delivered in lecture form. Students will mostly be encouraged to participate in a variety of activities that will allow them to practice skills and receive immediate personalised feedback.

Students are expected to do the mandatory background reading before the classes, and be able to provide a short verbal summary of readings and respond to questions relating to those readings. There will often be concept-or skill-development activities performed in class, usually in groups, but students will also be assigned activities to perform between classes.

In addition to reading set papers, you are encouraged to consult textbooks and read other journal articles. This will be valuable for developing knowledge, and essential for completing assessment tasks.

Policies and Procedures

Macquarie University policies and procedures are accessible from Policy Central. Students should be aware of the following policies in particular with regard to Learning and Teaching:
