Unit description

Critically analyses core institutions of the State as gendered entities to discern the implications of gender for democracy and thus answer the fundamental question, 'Is politics gendered?'. Drawing on contemporary theories of neo-institutionalism that identify the sociological aspects of institutions and how they interact with and affect society, the unit will critically examine foundational concepts and theories of political science, including precepts of liberal political theory and various theories of the State, to interrogate the gendered assumptions and outcomes of these. Secondary institutions and their 'logic of appropriateness' that are fundamental to Western democracies will then be examined through a gendered lens. These include the bureaucracy, the parliament, the judiciary, the electoral system, federalism and the Australian constitution. Finally, crucial policies of Australian governments will be examined in a global context with a view to determining their gendered nature and outcomes, such as war, foreign aid and responses to terrorism. Students will develop their theoretical knowledge of core concepts of political science, while sharpening their critical thinking and analytical skills especially in regard to scrutinising the presence of gender in so-called 'neutral' institutions, and heightening their understandings of Australia's role in global politics.

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

- 1) To be able to comprehend the basic problem of 'gender and the state'
- 2) To be able to outline some of the key elements of gender disadvantage in western capitalist society
- 3) To have an understanding of 'the state' and its various institutions
- 4) To be aware of some of the main criticisms of the state in relation to its inability to eradicate gender discrimination
- 5) To be aware of the ways in which the family, monogamy, motherhood, and marriage contribute to women's oppression

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Major Essay	45%	No	Week 7
On-line Quizzes	40%	No	Ongoing
Tutorial Participation	15%	No	Ongoing

Major Essay

Due: Week 7

Weighting: 45%

This essay, approximately 2000 words in length, provides students with the opportunity to explore a topic of interest in depth. Students should develop a considered answer to a specific question based on reading a range of sources wider than simply the key readings. (Students must read and refer to a minimum of 12 substantive sources.) A high standard essay would draw upon a wide range of resources to support a well-organized argument in response to the set question (essay questions will be provided in the Week 1 lecture). Remember, there is no necessarily 'correct' answer to each question: rather, there are arguments that are more persuasively made and intelligently constructed. Consider whether the arguments you read are logical and based on convincing evidence. The same criteria should apply to your own work.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 1) To be able to comprehend the basic problem of 'gender and the state'
- 2) To be able to outline some of the key elements of gender disadvantage in western capitalist society
- 3) To have an understanding of 'the state' and its various institutions

- 4) To be aware of some of the main criticisms of the state in relation to its inability to eradicate gender discrimination
- 5) To be aware of the ways in which the family, monogamy, motherhood, and marriage contribute to women's oppression

On-line Quizzes

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 40%

These quizzes will be held in various lectures (8 quizzes worth 5% each) throughout the semester. They will be based on material covered in the key readings and lectures, and the details in relation to which lectures they will be held in will not be announced prior to each lecture, meaning that you will not know in advance whether a quiz will be held in a given lecture. This is designed to ensure maximum participation in the course and maximum achievement in the quizzes. It also replaces the traditional end-of-semester exam, a flawed form of assessment that encourages loafing throughout the semester and cramming five minutes to midnight, by which time it is too late. More information about the quizzes will be provided during the lecture in Week 1.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 1) To be able to comprehend the basic problem of 'gender and the state'
- 2) To be able to outline some of the key elements of gender disadvantage in western capitalist society
- 3) To have an understanding of 'the state' and its various institutions
- 4) To be aware of some of the main criticisms of the state in relation to its inability to eradicate gender discrimination
- 5) To be aware of the ways in which the family, monogamy, motherhood, and marriage contribute to women's oppression

Tutorial Participation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 15%

Students enrolling in an on-campus course are expected to attend lectures and tutorials. They should be prepared to commit approximately 10 hours per week for each course. These 10 hours include lecture and tutorial attendance, undertaking weekly readings, miscellaneous study activities and assignment preparation and completion. Tutorial topics will follow one week after lectures, meaning that the topic for the tutorial in Week 2, for example, will be based on the Week 1 Lecture. The emphasis in tutorials will be upon group discussion (advancing and defending arguments orally), exploration of current issues, and practical exercises. The tutorials provide an opportunity to make connections between the broad principles and theories covered in lectures and contemporary political issues and events.

Tutorials provide the opportunity to ask questions about things you do not understand and to challenge things with which you do not agree. In preparation for each tutorial you are expected to read as widely as possible and to keep abreast of current affairs in order to contribute meaningfully to weekly discussions. Watching a YouTube video, reading someone's Facebook wall, and Googling something about a topic are not acceptable methods of preparing for tutorials. In an age of mass disinformation and information overload, you must be discerning about what you read. And, remember, attendance is not a synonym for participation, so you will be graded accordingly.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- 1) To be able to comprehend the basic problem of 'gender and the state'
- 2) To be able to outline some of the key elements of gender disadvantage in western capitalist society
- 3) To have an understanding of 'the state' and its various institutions
- 4) To be aware of some of the main criticisms of the state in relation to its inability to eradicate gender discrimination
- 5) To be aware of the ways in which the family, monogamy, motherhood, and marriage contribute to women's oppression

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- 1) To be able to comprehend the basic problem of 'gender and the state'
- 2) To be able to outline some of the key elements of gender disadvantage in western capitalist society
- 3) To have an understanding of 'the state' and its various institutions
