Unit description

Human beings are fundamentally social creatures who depend on one another for their survival and well-being, both physical and psychological. Everyone is born with powerful needs for love, friendship and belonging; similarly, we fear and avoid rejection, loneliness and the disapproval of others. Despite the central role they play in our lives, however, developing and maintaining happy and healthy relationships with family members, spouses, friends and even workmates is not easy, and professional psychologists spend the bulk of their time dealing with clients' relationship problems. This unit examines a variety of relationship topics from a social psychological perspective including attraction, love- and mate selection; kinship, friendship and enemyship; jealousy, betrayal and forgiveness; communication, conflict and aggression; and the processes involved in relationship breakdown and repair. Throughout, there is a strong emphasis on critically examining so-called 'pop' psychological approaches to relationships, and students are encouraged to examine the complexities of relationship structures and processes from different cultural perspectives.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships
- understand the strengths and weaknesses of research methods used in relationship research
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

General Assessment Information

You are required to submit your Research Report and Essay via Turnitin as a plagiarism check. Your Report and Essay will be automatically compared to the work of other students in this unit, previous students in this unit and at other universities, and material available on the Internet in subscription-based journal format or otherwise freely accessible information. Please read the section below on Academic Integrity for more information, and check out the following Website:

http://www.mq.edu.au/policy/docs/academic_honesty/policy.html

REQUESTS FOR EXTENSIONS AND LATE SUBMISSIONS

All requests for extensions must be made before the due date for the assignment.

Ordinarily, no extensions of time for submission of written work will be granted since sufficient time for its preparation will have been given. If an extension is required for medical or other extenuating circumstances, students may request this by submitting an online request via ask.mq.edu.au with supporting documentary evidence (such as medical certificate, counsellor note, or similar). The staff in the Faculty of Human Sciences Student Services Centre (FHSSSC) will make all decisions regarding extensions. Neither individual tutors nor the course convenor will grant extensions.

If an extension is granted the approval must be submitted via Turnitin with the assignment to avoid any late penalty. Failure to do so will result in a late penalty being applied as the marker will not know that an extension has been granted. If you have problems attaching the approval to your assignment for submission through Turnitin, please email your approval to Julie Fitness at Julie.Fitness@mq.edu.au

If you have any queries, please contact the staff in the Faculty of Human Sciences Student Services Centre in Level 3, Building C3A, Tel: 9850 9898.

Late Submissions:

- A penalty of 1 mark per day past the due date will apply to late research reports and essays.
- Assignments will not be accepted after marked assignments have been made available electronically

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
1. Research Report:	25%	No	10am, 3/9/2018
Essay	35%	No	10 am 15/10/18
Final examination	40%	No	Exam period

1. Research Report:

Due: 10am, 3/9/2018

Weighting: 25%

The purpose of this report is to give students experience of finding and critically reviewing relevant psychological literature on a relationship-related issue. Markers will be looking for a well-structured, coherent and thoughtful critique of the chosen literature.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

Essay

Due: 10 am 15/10/18

Weighting: 35%

The essay is designed to assess students' ability to critically evaluate scientific knowledge and formulate a coherent and intelligent discussion of the relevant issues of a topic within the psychology of human relationships. The essay questions will be available on the PSY350 web site.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships
- understand the strengths and weaknesses of research methods used in relationship research
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

Final examination

Due: Exam period

Weighting: 40%

The 2-hour multiple choice exam is designed to assess knowledge and understanding of material covered in the lectures, textbook, and readings. It will comprise 80 questions, each worth 0.5 marks. The exam will be held during the University examination period.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcome

- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement.

They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Assessment task

- Final examination

Commitment to Continuous Learning

Our graduates will have enquiring minds and a literate curiosity which will lead them to pursue knowledge for its own sake. They will continue to pursue learning in their careers and as they participate in the world. They will be capable of reflecting on their experiences and relationships with others and the environment, learning from them, and growing - personally, professionally and socially.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships
- understand the strengths and weaknesses of research methods used in relationship research
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships

- understand the strengths and weaknesses of research methods used in relationship research
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

Assessment task

- 1. Research Report:

Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

We want our graduates to be capable of reasoning, questioning and analysing, and to integrate and synthesise learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments; to be able to critique constraints, assumptions and limitations; to be able to think independently and systemically in relation to scholarly activity, in the workplace, and in the world. We want them to have a level of scientific and information technology literacy.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships
- understand the strengths and weaknesses of research methods used in relationship research
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

Assessment tasks

- 1. Research Report:
- Essay
- Final examination

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships
- understand the strengths and weaknesses of research methods used in relationship research
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

Assessment tasks

- Essay
- Final examination

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- analyze the strengths and weaknesses of competing explanations of issues in the field of human relationships
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

Assessment tasks

- 1. Research Report:
- Essay

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- explain contemporary issues in human relationships from a psychological perspective, with reference to relevant literature;
- understand the strengths and weaknesses of research methods used in relationship research
- apply findings from empirical research on relationships to real-world relationship issues
- critique so-called pop-psychological approaches to relationships from an informed, scientific perspective and effectively communicate findings

Changes from Previous Offering

Previous offerings of this unit included 5-minute oral presentations by students in tutorial classes. Student numbers have made this impractical, so individual presentations have been replaced with class activities and discussions.
