Unit description

In this unit new theoretical and conceptual knowledge of public history will be practiced and used to produce public history in a variety of forms. Partnerships have been discussed with the City of Sydney History Unit, the Dictionary of Sydney, local historical societies and museums in Sydney as well as elsewhere. The practice of public history outside of the university context will lead to further analysis of the relationship between the academic theory and the increasing practice and popularity of public history.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Students will be able to demonstrate a deep understanding and experience of the practice and function of public history in a particular context.

Students will explain from personal work place experiences the practice and function of public history.

Students will analyse why and how some academic historians engage with certain forms of public history.

Students will evaluate the social and political functions of historical knowledge and whether public history democratises historical research and knowledge.

Assessment Tasks
