Unit description

This unit will equip students with foundational research knowledge and skills in the broad area of Ethics. The unit will focus on an in-depth reading of foundational texts in the history of ethics and will examine their impact on current debates in the field on topics such as virtue, character, value, autonomy, emotions, and the nature of right action. Texts may include: Aristotle's Nichomachean Ethics, Hume's Treatise (Books II and III), Kant's Groundwork for the Metaphysics of Morals, and Mill's On Liberty. This year we will focus on Aristotle's and Kant's ethical writings, before engaging in a comparison of the works of these two key figures in the history of ethics.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

In-depth familiarity with the foundational philosophical writings of Aristotle and Kant in the field of ethics, focusing specifically on virtue, emotion, and moral motivation.

Sound comparative grasp of relevant key common and contrasting themes in the work of these philosophers.

Improved ability to read critically and independently

Clarity of thought; clarity of verbal expression; clarity of written expression

Delivery and Resources

Set Texts (students are required to have their own copies):

Aristotle, Nicomachean Ethics, translated by J.A.K. Thomson (Penguin, London: 2004).

Kant, I. Practical Philosophy, ed. M. Gregor (Cambridge University Press, Cambridge: 1999).

This book contains, in full, all of Kant's main writings on ethics. We will use the translations from this text.

Other readings:

These are listed in the unit schedule and access will be provided via iLearn.

Unit Schedule

Week 1 (Tuesday February 27): Introduction and Planning (Dr Lotz/Dr Formosa)

No reading requirement for this week's seminar. The week is to be used for commencement of the readings for the following weeks' seminars.

In this week we outline the unit, and explain the approach and focus we will take to the readings each week. We will also explain the unit structure, which involves bursts of intensive reading and seminar discussion, followed by time for online discussion and reflection, the completion of writing tasks, and preparation for the next intensive burst of seminar discussion. Since the amount of readings required each week during the intensive seminar periods is higher than usual, students will have more time in between the intensive seminar discussion weeks to contribute to online forums, undertake assessment tasks, and prepare for the next intensive burst of seminar discussion. The pedagogical aim of this approach is to facilitate higher quality student discussion and improve student engagement with the material for both internal and external students.

Please note: the below texts are provisional and are subject to change.

Week 2 (Tuesday March 6):

No off-line seminar.

Moderated forum discussion: background questions on Kant, Aristotle and Virtue

Reading preparation for the intensive section on Aristotle.
