Unit description

The purpose of this unit is to enable students to acquire research-based leadership skills and knowledge relevant to the process of organisational leadership. The unit encourages students to explore effective leadership theories and frameworks, and to develop skills in analysis and investigation that are necessary and that are required to undertake more advanced research. A solid understanding of concepts of work and organisation is a requirement for any advanced study of leadership theories. This unit provides students with essential learning experiences that develop the concepts and skills necessary for advanced research in leadership and management.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Discover new knowledge about the nature and processes of leading

Develop new insights about your own capacity to lead

Formulate views about the differences between leading and managing, and analyse how they complement one another

Create a development plan based on unit content, experience, case studies, reading, practical examples and reflection

General Assessment Information

For all assignment work, no extensions will be granted. There will be a deduction of 10% of the total available marks from the total awarded mark, for each 24 hour period, or part thereof, that the submission is late (for example, 25 hours late in submission will result in a 20% penalty). This penalty does not apply in cases where an application for Special Consideration is made, and approved.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Assessment 1 (Individual)	20%	No	Week 5
Assessment 2 (Group)	30%	No	Week 9
Individual reflexive essay	50%	No	Week 13

Assessment 1 (Individual)

Due: Week 5

Weighting: 20%

Case analysis provides an opportunity to demonstrate your ability to apply core concepts from the course to a specific example of leadership and management. You will be provided with the details closer to the assignment date.

Essays are to be your independent, and original work. Essays will be formal in style, include appropriate source citation and reference lists. Information on required essay format will be included in the assessment document in the Assessments section of iLearn.

Please put a word count on the front page of your assignment and ensure that you reference appropriately using the APA or Harvard style. There are excellent online reference generators that can assist you with this task.

Assignments exceeding the word limit by more than 10% will be penalised as will those that are more than 10% shorter than the word limit.

The assessment must be submitted via Turnitin. A Turnitin link will be provided in the relevant assessment section for the unit in iLearn.

The iLearn web address is <https://ilearn.mq.edu.au>

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Discover new knowledge about the nature and processes of leading
- Develop new insights about your own capacity to lead
- Formulate views about the differences between leading and managing, and analyse how they complement one another

Assessment 2 (Group)

Due: Week 9

Weighting: 30%

Case analysis provides an opportunity to demonstrate your ability to apply core concepts from the course to a specific example of leadership and management. You will be provided with the details closer to the assignment date.

You will be required to answer a question related to the case study. 50% of the marks for this assessment will be for individual contribution; and 50% of the marks will be for the overall team output.

Reports are to be your independent AND original work, and will be formal in style, include appropriate source citation and reference lists.

Please put a word count on the front page of your assignment and ensure that you reference appropriately using the APA or Harvard style. There are excellent online referencing generators that can assist you with this task.

Individual reflexive essay

Due: Week 13

Weighting: 50%

The individual essay seeks to consolidate your learning by asking you to write a reflexive essay that considers your experiences in this course, and in life, and how you can use that experience to plan your own ongoing development as a leader. You will have to use the research literature to justify the efficacy of this self-development plan; you should also draw on cases and practical examples from organisations.

You are required to keep a weekly reflective journal for this assignment. The journal will be your primary data source but you must cite the literature on management, leadership, and other relevant research areas. You must attach a copy of your diary to the assignment when you submit it. You can quote your journal entries as evidence to support your argument in the essay. This assignment will allow you to demonstrate your understanding (or the degree to which you have made sense) of the course and its application to your career and how you see that learning continuing after the course has finished. To this end, your assignment must put forward a convincing and well justified self-development plan

What is different about this essay compared to others you may have written at University is that you will be required to write in the first person. You are not required to write an essay summarising the content of the course (or parts of the course). What you are required to write about is what you can imagine you can do with the content of this course to become a better leader.

An essay is by definition a written argument. You must, therefore, demonstrate that you have a particular point of view and you must support this with evidence from the course and your journal and the literature. To this end you may also need to research beyond the set readings already provided to you in the course materials.

A basic essay plan includes:

- Introduction
- Identify what you will focus on. Set out your evidence for focussing on those things
- Review the literature that explains why those things are important
- Review the literature that explains how to improve those things
- Reflect on how the literature informs your self-knowledge and plans
- Set out a future development plan
- Conclusions
- Reference list

Essays are to be your independent, and original work. Essays will be formal in style, include appropriate source citation and reference lists.

Please put a word count on the front page of your assignment and ensure that you reference appropriately using the APA or Harvard style. There are excellent online citation generators that can assist you with this task

Assignments exceeding the word limit by more than 10% will be penalised, as will those that are more than 10% shorter than the word limit.

You should be well prepared for this assignment from attendance and participation in classes, and through completing your reflexive learning journal.

The assessment must be submitted via Turnitin. A Turnitin link will be provided in the relevant assessment section for the unit in iLearn.

The iLearn web address is <https://ilearn.mq.edu.au>

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Discover new knowledge about the nature and processes of leading
- Develop new insights about your own capacity to lead
- Formulate views about the differences between leading and managing, and analyse how they complement one another
- Create a development plan based on unit content, experience, case studies, reading, practical examples and reflection

Delivery and Resources

This course equips students with a sound working knowledge of the leadership styles, roles and skills necessary to lead organisations effectively. Importantly, the course will provide you with useful insights into the nature of leadership, including helping you to develop new understandings of your own strengths and weaknesses as a leader and manager. Building on your new knowledge, insights and understandings you will also develop new leadership (and management) skills.

There is no recommended text book for this unit. However, it is recommended that you read widely to augment the unit content and the class discussions.

You will need to come to class prepared to share your own experiences and engage with other students in class based activities, including a group-based online leadership simulation.

Throughout this course we will develop frameworks that will help you develop as a practicing leader.

You will need a WiFi enabled laptop for use in class.

You are expected to spend 10 hours per week working on this course.

Attendance is strongly recommended, and is compulsory during the Mt. Everest simulations in the latter half of the unit (please refer to weekly schedule). Reminders will be given in class and posted on iLearn.

To successfully complete this unit, you will need to achieve an overall mark of at least 50%.

This unit and its content was originally developed by Professor David Rooney. Some content and assessments have been progressively updated through S1 and S2, 2017, and for S1 2018.

The timetable can be found at http://students.mq.edu.au/student\_admin/timetables

Assessment task

- Assessment 2 (Group)

Learning and teaching activity

- The three-hour weekly classes will comprise lectures, discussions, video clips, role plays, case studies, and games.

Changes from Previous Offering

Assessments have been changed to assist in keeping the unit current and relevant.

Research and Practice, Global Contexts and Sustainability

Research

Referring to the recommended reading, students should use this as a starting point. There is much value in reading texts written by practitioners, in addition to academic papers and texts written by academics. The business sections of bookstores abound with books by, and about, corporate, political, sporting and other leaders.

Global Context

Business today is global, and most businesses, even though they might not realise it, are impacted by the global nature of business. The days of manufactured products being produced from raw material to finished product in one or two factories, are over. Consider the production of a suit sold in a UK high-street chain store. Suit designed in the UK; wool produced in Australia and topped in China, dyed in Italy, spun in Romania; cloth made in Yorkshire; cloth cut and suit made in Cambodia; sold in UK store (or online to someone living in Sydney).

This is just one example of globalisation - a concept of which leaders must be aware.

Sustainability

Students should be aware that sustainability has a much broader meaning than 'green' issues, such as renewable energy and recycling. Companies today must consider their Triple Bottom Line, which means that they must focus on the sustainability of People, Profits and the Planet. Leaders should be aware of the implications of all 3 Ps for their organisations, including, but limited to: flexible working, employee rights, equity, diversity and inclusion; ethical decision making and the trade off with the profit incentive (short term and long term); reputation risk in areas such as pollution, and the issues just mentioned. In turn, these topics may inform discussion on outsourcing, offshoring and recruitment practices, supplier choices, and stakeholder (and shareholder) engagement. Students should familiarise themselves with the ten principles of the UN Global Compact and the Principles of Responsible Management Education, as well as company annual reports that provide insights into these areas.
