To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world

To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world

To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions

To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change

To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

General Assessment Information

Late Submissions

Late Submission Penalty “Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – two (2) marks out of 100 will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments – e.g. quizzes, online tests.”

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Major Essay	45%	No	Week 7
In-lecture Quizzes	40%	No	Weekly in lectures
Class participation	15%	No	Weekly in class

Major Essay

Due: Week 7

Weighting: 45%

This essay, approximately 2000 words in length, provides students with the opportunity to explore a topic of interest in depth, selected from one of the Essay questions provided in the Week 1 lecture notes. Students should develop a considered answer to a specific question based on reading a range of sources wider than simply the key readings. (Students must read and refer to a minimum of 12 substantive sources.) A high standard essay would draw upon a wide range of resources to support a well-organized argument in response to the set question (essay questions will be provided in the Week 1 lecture). Remember, there is no necessarily ‘correct’ answer to each question: rather, there are arguments that are more persuasively made and intelligently constructed. Consider whether the arguments you read are logical and provide convincing evidence. The same criteria should apply to your own work.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world

- To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change
- To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

In-lecture Quizzes

Due: Weekly in lectures

Weighting: 40%

These quizzes will be held in various lectures (8 quizzes worth 5% each) throughout the semester. They will be based on material covered in the key readings and lectures, and the details in relation to which lectures they will be held in will not be announced prior to each lecture, meaning that you will not know in advance whether a quiz will be held in a given lecture. This is designed to ensure maximum participation in the course and maximum achievement in the quizzes. It also replaces the traditional end-of-semester exam, a flawed form of assessment that encourages loafing throughout the semester and cramming five minutes to midnight, by which time it is too late. More information about the quizzes will be provided during the lecture in Week 1.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change
- To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Class participation

Due: Weekly in class

Weighting: 15%

Students enrolling in an on-campus course are expected to attend lectures and tutorials. They should be prepared to commit approximately 10 hours per week for each course. These 10 hours include lecture and tutorial attendance, undertaking weekly readings, miscellaneous study activities and assignment preparation and completion. Tutorial topics will follow one week after lectures, meaning that the topic for the tutorial in Week 2, for example, will be based on the Week 1 Lecture. The emphasis in tutorials will be upon group discussion (advancing and defending arguments orally), exploration of current issues, and practical exercises. The tutorials provide an opportunity to make connections between the broad principles and theories covered in lectures and contemporary political issues and events.

Tutorials provide the opportunity to ask questions about things you do not understand and to challenge things with which you do not agree. In preparation for each tutorial you are expected to read as widely as possible and to keep abreast of current affairs in order to contribute meaningfully to weekly discussions. Watching a YouTube video, reading someone's Facebook Wall, and Googling something about a topic are not acceptable methods of preparing for tutorials. In an age of mass disinformation and information overload, you must be discerning about what you read. And, remember, attendance is not a synonym for participation, so you will be graded accordingly.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- To be able to understand the key conceptual issues and debates surrounding revolutions, including questions of agency, organisation, the role of the state, and the possibilities - or otherwise - of social change
- To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions
- To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Assessment task

- In-lecture Quizzes

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be aware of the arguments for and against revolution vis-a-vis reform as a strategy for social change

Assessment tasks

- In-lecture Quizzes
- Class participation

Commitment to Continuous Learning

Our graduates will have enquiring minds and a literate curiosity which will lead them to pursue knowledge for its own sake. They will continue to pursue learning in their careers and as they participate in the world. They will be capable of reflecting on their experiences and relationships with others and the environment, learning from them, and growing - personally, professionally and socially.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions

Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

We want our graduates to be capable of reasoning, questioning and analysing, and to integrate and synthesise learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments; to be able to critique constraints, assumptions and limitations; to be able to think independently and systemically in relation to scholarly activity, in the workplace, and in the world. We want them to have a level of scientific and information technology literacy.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be able to account for some of the causes of revolutions

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- To be able to differentiate between the types of revolutions that have occurred throughout history in different parts of the world
- To be familiar with some of the leading figures of revolutions throughout history in different parts of the world
