Unit description

Social movements are an important presence in contemporary societies. How are they organised? Why do they emerge? What shapes their development? This unit provides a framework for answering these questions. It focuses on both the history of social activism, including campaigns like the suffragettes and civil rights movement through to the Arab Spring and climate campaigning; as well as prominent theories and concepts for understanding the rise and success of social movements. As part of the assessment students will examine a contemporary campaign, looking first hand at how movements organise and evaluating their success. This unit also allows students to progress to SOC352 where they have the opportunity to work in a placement with a social change organisation.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

identify the major theories developed to explain social movements

evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the dominant theories
apply social movement theory to contemporary Australian and international movements
analyse strategic and ethical problems that arise in the quest for political change reflect on practical realities of social movements through participation in activities of social movements and social movement organisations
design and execute primary research on a particular social movement campaign

General Assessment Information

Participation in seminars

The content of the seminars will be largely driven by students working in small groups, and will complement the traditional lecture series. Lecturers will be facilitating discussion on the set questions (highlighted in lectures and posted on ilearn) and helping guide you through the materials that we will be using in the course (readings, podcasts, videos and other relevant materials).

You are expected to prepare for class by consulting these materials beforehand and bringing along your notes for discussion with your group. The more you are prepared, the better your group discussion will be!

Regular time will be set aside every few weeks leading up to the major assignment for you to discuss progress towards your campaign analysis and raise any questions you have.

There will also be a component of your participation mark allocated to peer feedback on the conference presentations in Weeks 12-13. This will be a combination of verbal and written feedback.

We look forward to hearing how this combination of different activities works as we go through the semester.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Reading Reflection	20%	No	End of Week 4
Campaign analysis outline	20%	No	End of Week 7
Campaign analysis	40%	No	End of Week 13
Workshop participation	20%	No	Ongoing

Reading Reflection

Due: End of Week 4

Weighting: 20%

1 page (250 words) reflection based on one selection from weekly readings (i.e. weeks 2-4)

On successful completion you will be able to:

- identify the major theories developed to explain social movements
- evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the dominant theories

Campaign analysis outline

Due: End of Week 7

Weighting: 20%

Short (750 words) plan for campaign analysis

On successful completion you will be able to:

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcome

- analyse strategic and ethical problems that arise in the quest for political change

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the dominant theories
- apply social movement theory to contemporary Australian and international movements
- analyse strategic and ethical problems that arise in the quest for political change
- reflect on practical realities of social movements through participation in activities of social movements and social movement organisations
- design and execute primary research on a particular social movement campaign

Assessment tasks

- Campaign analysis outline
- Campaign analysis

Commitment to Continuous Learning

Our graduates will have enquiring minds and a literate curiosity which will lead them to pursue knowledge for its own sake. They will continue to pursue learning in their careers and as they participate in the world. They will be capable of reflecting on their experiences and relationships with others and the environment, learning from them, and growing - personally, professionally and socially.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcome

- reflect on practical realities of social movements through participation in activities of social movements and social movement organisations

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- identify the major theories developed to explain social movements
- evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the dominant theories
- apply social movement theory to contemporary Australian and international movements
- reflect on practical realities of social movements through participation in activities of social movements and social movement organisations

Assessment tasks

- Reading Reflection
- Campaign analysis outline
- Campaign analysis
- Workshop participation

Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

We want our graduates to be capable of reasoning, questioning and analysing, and to integrate and synthesise learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments; to be able to critique constraints, assumptions and limitations; to be able to think independently and systemically in relation to scholarly activity, in the workplace, and in the world. We want them to have a level of scientific and information technology literacy.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- identify the major theories developed to explain social movements
- evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the dominant theories
- apply social movement theory to contemporary Australian and international movements
- reflect on practical realities of social movements through participation in activities of social movements and social movement organisations
- design and execute primary research on a particular social movement campaign

Assessment tasks

- Reading Reflection
- Campaign analysis outline
- Campaign analysis
- Workshop participation

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- identify the major theories developed to explain social movements
- evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of the dominant theories
- apply social movement theory to contemporary Australian and international movements
- reflect on practical realities of social movements through participation in activities of social movements and social movement organisations
- design and execute primary research on a particular social movement campaign

Assessment tasks

- Reading Reflection
- Campaign analysis outline
- Campaign analysis

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Assessment task

- Workshop participation

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- apply social movement theory to contemporary Australian and international movements
- analyse strategic and ethical problems that arise in the quest for political change
- reflect on practical realities of social movements through participation in activities of social movements and social movement organisations

Assessment task

- Campaign analysis

Socially and Environmentally Active and Responsible

We want our graduates to be aware of and have respect for self and others; to be able to work with others as a leader and a team player; to have a sense of connectedness with others and country; and to have a sense of mutual obligation. Our graduates should be informed and active participants in moving society towards sustainability.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- apply social movement theory to contemporary Australian and international movements
- analyse strategic and ethical problems that arise in the quest for political change
- reflect on practical realities of social movements through participation in activities of social movements and social movement organisations

Assessment task

- Campaign analysis

Changes from Previous Offering

What has changed: This semester we have reinstated a weekly lecture, as suggested by student feedback on 2017 class format. The seminar will continue to use one of the University's active learning spaces, and will be based around group discussion of the week's topic in the context of weekly readings and their related discussion questions. See 'General Assessment Information' above for details on how this will work.
