Unit description

Macquarie is the international home of big history, and this is its flagship unit. While most history units look in detail at a particular country, theme or period, this unit surveys history on the biggest possible scale. It begins with the origins of the Universe and goes on to tell a series of linked stories about the origins of the stars and planets; the earth and its inhabitants; human beings; various types of human societies; and global interactions to the present day. Students in the unit explore the changing interactions between people, and people and the environment. In so doing, they are encouraged to think about the kinds of evidence available to historians and the role that history can play in understanding the local and global communities that people belong to today. In the final week we will ask what this large story may have to tell us about the future. Finally, the unit invites students to think about what they regard as the central themes of world histories and big history. No prior knowledge of science or history is required

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Analyse and express your judgement about a range of historical phenomena in written form

Read literature from different historical disciplines and interpret written and material evidence with appreciation and understanding

Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule

Understand the relationship between human history and the natural sciences

Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of a major historical phenomenon in big history

Construct a synopsis of big history, highlighting a self-selected theme

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Essay 1	20%	No	11:55pm Wednesday Week 3
Essay 2	30%	No	11:55pm Wednesday Week 5
Synoptic essay	40%	No	11:55pm Thursday 25 January
Online participation	10%	No	Weekly

Essay 1

Due: 11:55pm Wednesday Week 3

Weighting: 20%

In this assessment you are required to write an analytical and argumentative paper of 1200 words on one (1) of seven possible topics. You will need to base your paper on specific evidence drawn from lectures, tutorial discussions, and the readings. You should undertake some additional reading and research beyond the required reading for the Tutorial Topic that relates to the question – the Suggested Additional Readings listed for each Tutorial Topic are a good place to start but these are not exhaustive.

Your essay must be fully referenced, including footnotes and a bibliography – see the referencing guidelines on the unit website for instructions. The footnotes and bibliography are not included in the word count.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Analyse and express your judgement about a range of historical phenomena in written form
- Read literature from different historical disciplines and interpret written and material evidence with appreciation and understanding
- Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule
- Understand the relationship between human history and the natural sciences
- Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of a major historical phenomenon in big history

Essay 2

Due: 11:55pm Wednesday Week 5

Weighting: 30%

In this assessment you are required to write an analytical and argumentative paper of 1700 words on one (1) of eleven possible topics. You will need to base your paper on specific evidence drawn from lectures, tutorial discussions, and the readings. You should undertake some additional reading and research beyond the required reading for the Tutorial Topic that relates to the question – the Suggested Additional Readings listed for each Tutorial Topic are a good place to start but these are not exhaustive.

Your essay must be fully referenced, including footnotes and a bibliography – see the referencing guidelines on the unit website for instructions. The footnotes and bibliography are not included in the word count.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Analyse and express your judgement about a range of historical phenomena in written form
- Read literature from different historical disciplines and interpret written and material evidence with appreciation and understanding
- Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule
- Understand the relationship between human history and the natural sciences
- Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of a major historical phenomenon in big history

Synoptic essay

Due: 11:55pm Thursday 25 January

Weighting: 40%

The final, synoptic essay 2000 words, takes the place of an exam, so it will not be returned with comments. The synoptic essay requires you to attempt an overview of the entire course, because what makes big history distinctive is not the details, but rather the way it can help you see interconnections between many different areas of knowledge. So the synoptic essay will encourage you to develop your ability to see connections between different areas of the course. Everyone will be asked to answer the same question: “What, in your view, was the most important single theme of MHIX115 : An Introduction to Big History? Give examples from different parts of the course to support your view.” As you work on the synoptic essay, make sure you touch on several different parts of the course, and also that you are aware of the rubrics that we will use as we mark the essay.

Your essay must be fully referenced, including footnotes and a bibliography – see the referencing guidelines on the unit website for instructions. The footnotes and bibliography are not included in the word count.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Analyse and express your judgement about a range of historical phenomena in written form
- Read literature from different historical disciplines and interpret written and material evidence with appreciation and understanding
- Plan, revise and submit written work according to schedule
- Understand the relationship between human history and the natural sciences
- Draw together and judge pre-selected and self-located evidence to provide an analysis of a major historical phenomenon in big history
- Construct a synopsis of big history, highlighting a self-selected theme

Online participation

Due: Weekly

Weighting: 10%

The online discussion task, undertaken through the iLearn site, tests your ability to communicate ideas, your appreciation and comprehension of the themes and concepts discussed in the course, your ability to critically assess and evaluate the arguments of others, and your ability to clearly articulate your thoughts. It is also a task that monitors your progress across the unit topics. You are expected to do the weekly readings, participate in weekly discussions and make postings within the time frame of each discussion topic. These begin on Monday of the discussion week and run through to the following Sunday. You should look to answer at least two of the set questions in each section of each week, as well as engaging with the posts of other students. Each individual post should be kept to a maximum of 100 words. A professional and courteous approach towards staff and fellow students is expected at all times.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Analyse and express your judgement about a range of historical phenomena in written form
- Read literature from different historical disciplines and interpret written and material evidence with appreciation and understanding
- Understand the relationship between human history and the natural sciences

Delivery and Resources

Students will require the textbook: David Christian, Cynthia Stokes Brown and Craig Benjamin, Big History: Between Nothing and Everything, New York: McGraw-Hill Education, 2014.

All other essential readings are provided online. Students may be required to do further research for their essays.

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes
