Unit description The September 11 terrorist attacks focused world attention on the Middle East and its relations with the West. This unit introduces students to the domestic politics of the Middle East, and to the intellectual and ideological currents shaping those politics. The first weeks are devoted to the contemporary history of the region from the late nineteenth century to the rise of post-colonial states in the area. Broad ranging theoretical concepts necessary for an understanding of Middle Eastern political processes, and different ways of looking at those processes, are considered. The unit then examines in detail the structure of government and the politics of the region. Particular attention is paid to the region's ongoing relations with the West and the current war against terror; the emergence and future prospects of religious fundamentalism; and the rise of Arab nationalism and Zionism. The Arab–Israeli conflict, the 2003 Iraq War and the impact of globalism are also covered.

Tutorial Participation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 20%

Students will choose a topic and submit a written presentation (about 800 words) on the iLearn discussion board in the relevant week (no later than Tuesday 5pm). All external students will also discuss online the posted presentations, by posting their comments on iLearn. The 800 word discussion paper is worth 5% and weekly contributions will also be worth 5%.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Undertake independent learning and research throughout the semester.
- Outline the geography and contemporary history of the Middle East.
- Participate and lead, when necessary, in class discussions.
- Raise awareness of the importance of a critical approach to the study of the Middle East, in the particular global post 9/11 environment.

Online Tutorial Activity

Due: 11-17 December 2017

Weighting: 15%

A learning activity will be posted on iLearn and all students are expected to complete it. Further instructions will be given in class and on iLearn.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Undertake independent learning and research throughout the semester.

Research Essay

Due: 12 January, 2018, 5pm

Weighting: 40%

The essay must be 2000 words, excluding footnotes and bibliography. Essays with less or more words will be penalised. The essay will assess your ability to research the literature, form a thesis, analyse the available material and then present a coherent and compelling argument as a polished academic essay. Essays should refer to a range of material in addition to the required reading and be correctly and consistently referenced. Students are expected to do their own research. The basis of this material should be academic works i.e. chapters in edited books or academic articles in recognised journals. Wikipedia, and similar web-based resources, are not acceptable sources for the essay. Further guidance will be given during lectures and tutorials.

Essays are to be submitted via Turnitin on the unit's iLearn webpage. Links will be created before the due date.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Effectively communicate their understanding and analytical ability in both spoken and, particularly, polished written form.
- Use a wide range of written and digital resources related to Middle East politics.
- Raise awareness of the importance of a critical approach to the study of the Middle East, in the particular global post 9/11 environment.

Final Exam

Due: 25-29 January 2018

Weighting: 25%

Students will find their exam on iLearn. You will all have 1 hour to complete the exam and will have to answer essay questions in that time frame. Further details to be given during the semester.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Undertake independent learning and research throughout the semester.

- Outline and critically evaluate theoretical debates related to the contemporary Middle East.
- Outline the geography and contemporary history of the Middle East.
