Unit description

The United States is reportedly a nation in decline, as it confronts a multiplicity of global military and economic challenges. By examining the global ascent of the United States, and the enduring tension between isolationism and internationalism, this unit provides historical context for understanding the current crises facing the United States. As well as paying specific attention to the role of military power in driving US foreign policy, this unit considers the ideological, political, and cultural imperatives that have underpinned the American Empire. Specific topics include American exceptionalism and Manifest Destiny, the Indian Wars, the Spanish-American War and America's acquisition of empire, the United States and the two World Wars, the Cold War, the post-Cold War world, and 9/11 and the War on Terror.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Demonstrate an understanding of the history of US foreign relations and the role of the military in the projection of American power.

Analyse historical evidence, scholarship and changing representations of the past.

Identify and interpret a wide variety of secondary and primary materials.

Contribute to contemporary debates about US foreign policy and military power with an informed and critical understanding of the relationship between past and present.

Examine historical issues by undertaking research according to the methodological and ethical conventions of the discipline.

Construct complex historical arguments, and defend and modify them rigorously and persuasively, both in class and in written form.

General Assessment Information

Penalties for late submission of work.

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – two (2) marks out of 100 will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments – e.g. quizzes, online tests.

Weighting: 10%

Students will be assessed on their class contribution. They will be marked on the basis of their contribution to discussion, their engagement with others, as well as their level of class preparation.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the history of US foreign relations and the role of the military in the projection of American power.
- Analyse historical evidence, scholarship and changing representations of the past.
- Identify and interpret a wide variety of secondary and primary materials.

- Contribute to contemporary debates about US foreign policy and military power with an informed and critical understanding of the relationship between past and present.
- Examine historical issues by undertaking research according to the methodological and ethical conventions of the discipline.
- Construct complex historical arguments, and defend and modify them rigorously and persuasively, both in class and in written form.

Essay Proposal & Bibliography

Due: Week 4

Weighting: 15%

This task will assess your ability to develop a research question and approach, as well as your ability to locate and analyse primary and secondary sources. It is the first step towards developing your research essay.

You should proceed as follows:

Thinking about a topic: It is best to start this process as early as possible. Look at the weekly lecture and tutorial schedule. What themes in this course do you find most interesting? What questions are you interested in exploring? A time period?

Developing a question: Your question needs to be direct and focused, because you will be assessed on how you answer it.

Submitting your proposal: The proposal is due WEEK 4 via turnitin on iLearn.

Your proposal should be 500 words and must include the following:

1. Your research question, clearly framed as an essay question, rather than simply as an idea.
2. Your approach to the question. In outlining your approach, consider the following questions:
 - What is your topic about? What are the key issues and themes? Why are they important?
 - What might your main primary and secondary sources be? Are they accessible? Why are they important?
 - Are there questions about evidence or methodology you need to consider?
3. A list of sources.
4. The proposal enables you to start thinking about your research essay at an early stage and understand where your work will fit within the relevant field of study. If you are unsure what an annotated bibliography looks like, see the following websites:
 - <https://student.unsw.edu.au/annotated-bibliography>

- <http://guides.library.cornell.edu/annotatedbibliography>
- <http://www.citewrite.qut.edu.au/write/annotatedbibliography.jsp>

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the history of US foreign relations and the role of the military in the projection of American power.
- Analyse historical evidence, scholarship and changing representations of the past.
- Identify and interpret a wide variety of secondary and primary materials.
- Examine historical issues by undertaking research according to the methodological and ethical conventions of the discipline.
- Construct complex historical arguments, and defend and modify them rigorously and persuasively, both in class and in written form.

Research Essay

Due: Week 10

Weighting: 35%

This assessment task evaluates your ability to construct an argument in response to your own self-devised research question, based on primary and secondary sources. You need to observe the conventions of writing and referencing as outlined in "Writing Essays in History"

Your final essay should be 2,500 words, not including referencing.

This assessment is to be submitted via turnitin on iLearn. Remember to submit the essay self-assessment (available on iLearn) sheet with your essay. You must also append a short statement, about one paragraph, on how you have utilised the feedback you have received for your essay proposal in completing your final research project.

There is a rubric for this assessment task included as a PDF download in the "Assessments" section on iLearn.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the history of US foreign relations and the role of the military in the projection of American power.
- Analyse historical evidence, scholarship and changing representations of the past.
- Identify and interpret a wide variety of secondary and primary materials.
- Contribute to contemporary debates about US foreign policy and military power with an informed and critical understanding of the relationship between past and present.
- Examine historical issues by undertaking research according to the methodological and ethical conventions of the discipline.
- Construct complex historical arguments, and defend and modify them rigorously and persuasively, both in class and in written form.

Annotated Bibliography

Due: Week 10

Weighting: 10%

This exercise consists of a brief (two or three sentences will be sufficient in most cases) discussion of the value – or otherwise – of each of the sources you have consulted.

The purpose of this exercise is to encourage you to think critically about the books and articles you use. The Annotated Bibliography must be submitted at the same time as your essay.

I appreciate that many of you will not have written an Annotated Bibliography before, so I'll discuss the exercise in more detail in lecture and tutorials. In other words, don't be intimidated.

Please note: you are also required to include a "normal" Bibliography, appended to the end of your essay.

If you are unsure what an annotated bibliography looks like, see the following websites:

<https://student.unsw.edu.au/annotated-bibliography>

<http://guides.library.cornell.edu/annotatedbibliography>

<http://www.citewrite.qut.edu.au/write/annotatedbibliography.jsp>

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Analyse historical evidence, scholarship and changing representations of the past.
- Identify and interpret a wide variety of secondary and primary materials.
- Examine historical issues by undertaking research according to the methodological and ethical conventions of the discipline.

Take Home Exam

Due: Week 13

Weighting: 30%

An end-of-semester take home exam will cover content drawn from the entire unit. The exam will consist of 2 questions and the maximum word length will be 1,500 words. Late submission of the exam will not be accepted.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the history of US foreign relations and the role of the military in the projection of American power.
- Analyse historical evidence, scholarship and changing representations of the past.

- Identify and interpret a wide variety of secondary and primary materials.
- Contribute to contemporary debates about US foreign policy and military power with an informed and critical understanding of the relationship between past and present.
- Examine historical issues by undertaking research according to the methodological and ethical conventions of the discipline.
- Construct complex historical arguments, and defend and modify them rigorously and persuasively, both in class and in written form.

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Demonstrate an understanding of the history of US foreign relations and the role of the military in the projection of American power.
- Analyse historical evidence, scholarship and changing representations of the past.
- Identify and interpret a wide variety of secondary and primary materials.
- Contribute to contemporary debates about US foreign policy and military power with an informed and critical understanding of the relationship between past and present.

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Demonstrate an understanding of the history of US foreign relations and the role of the military in the projection of American power.
- Analyse historical evidence, scholarship and changing representations of the past.
- Identify and interpret a wide variety of secondary and primary materials.
- Contribute to contemporary debates about US foreign policy and military power with an informed and critical understanding of the relationship between past and present.

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Contribute to contemporary debates about US foreign policy and military power with an informed and critical understanding of the relationship between past and present.
