Unit description

This unit provides an in-depth examination of American history since 1945, including an analysis of the profound political, economic, and social changes within the United States, along with the transformation of America's role in world affairs following World War II. Although most lectures will deal in turn with domestic and foreign aspects of modern US history, the unit also explores their interactions at every stage from the era of McCarthyism, when Cold War paranoia produced social and political repression at home, to the 1960s with its challenges to the prevailing order and values, through the post-Cold War period, characterized by uncertainties in foreign policy and ongoing domestic divisions. The unit concludes with an examination of the post-9/11 period, which has posed new challenges to American foreign policy, and tested the social, political, and cultural fabric of what Winston Churchill once described as "the great republic." Considerable attention will be given to the aspirations and activism of African-Americans, other minorities, and women, whose experiences have often been at odds with American ideology and rhetoric about national uniqueness based on freedom and democracy.

Important Academic Dates

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.

Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.

Better appreciate the nature of argument, and the status and role of different kinds of historical sources and evidence.

Work in an independent, adaptive, and self-motivated fashion, as well as interact effectively with others for a common outcome.

Assess research problems, and seek out, organize, marshal, and deploy to best effect the relevant intellectual resources needed to solve those problems.

General Assessment Information

Penalties for late submission of work.

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – two (2) marks out of 100 will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments – e.g. quizzes, online tests.

Tutorial Participation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 15%

Face-to-face and online discussion tests your ability to communicate ideas, your appreciation and comprehension of the themes and concepts discussed in the course, your ability to critically assess and evaluate the arguments of others, and your ability to clearly articulate your thoughts. It also monitors your progress across the unit topics. Internal students are expected to attend weekly tutorials and participate in weekly discussions in class.

External students are expected to make online postings within the time frame of each discussion topic. These begin on Monday of the discussion week and run through to the following Sunday. You will be assessed on the quality of your responses, the frequency of your posts and your engagement with other students. A professional and courteous approach towards staff and fellow students is expected at all times. The purpose of this forum is not the presentation of your personal opinions but the discussion of topics arising from the lectures and readings. You can comment on other students' posts provided you follow the rules of netiquette and keep your discussion within the bounds of the question raised. This forum should be a substitute for a live tutorial.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.
- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.
- Better appreciate the nature of argument, and the status and role of different kinds of historical sources and evidence.
- Work in an independent, adaptive, and self-motivated fashion, as well as interact effectively with others for a common outcome.
- Assess research problems, and seek out, organize, marshal, and deploy to best effect the relevant intellectual resources needed to solve those problems.

Essay Plan and Bibliography

Due: Week 5

Weighting: 15%

This Essay Plan and Bibliography is designed to help you begin preparing your essay at an early stage of semester.

You should ensure you address the following questions:

1. What is my topic about?
2. Who are the some of the important historians in this field?
3. What are there other themes or issues I need to understand in order to explore this topic properly?
4. What is my proposed structure for the essay?

This task which assesses whether students have understood the history of the topic; demonstrated good judgement regarding the kinds of historical primary and secondary sources required for 200-level university history essay; and understood how and why different historians have different approaches to or interpretations of historical events.

Some of you are no doubt wondering: can I change my mind about which question I answer?

Answer: If your interest has changed by the time you start work on your essay and you want to write about a different topic, you may do so. You should be aware, however, that you may be disadvantaging yourself in comparison to other students since you will not have the feedback provided after the project proposal. If you need help, please contact Daniel or Chris.

The Essay Plan should be approx. 500 words in length.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.
- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.
- Work in an independent, adaptive, and self-motivated fashion, as well as interact effectively with others for a common outcome.
- Assess research problems, and seek out, organize, marshal, and deploy to best effect the relevant intellectual resources needed to solve those problems.

Essay

Due: Week 10

Weighting: 40%

Due Friday 19 October 2018, 11:59pm, 2,500 words (including references)

The aim of this task is to assess your ability to produce an extended response, in written form, to a specific question. Chose from the list of questions included below.

At 200 level, you should aim to produce history essays that reflect your ability to research (in both primary and secondary sources), to find and analyse information, to make an historical argument and to write clearly and cogently. You need to try to write analytically not descriptively. Take care not to tell “only” us a story about the past. You need to make an argument about the past. Indeed, you must build a strong argument through every paragraph.

You must present your essay with a title, wide margins, page numbers, and double-spaced. You must cite your references correctly and provide a bibliography at the end, starting on a new page.

The main essay should be fully referenced in line with the “writing essays in history” referencing guide. You will be penalised in the major essay for inadequate or incorrect referencing.

Essay Questions

1. Focussing on 1-2 social issues from the 1950s (gender dynamics, race relations, sexuality, youth culture, political movements, other social critique/s, etc.), analyse the proposition that the era was, “a fertile period, a seedbed of ideas that would burgeon and live in the more activist, less reflective climate that followed.”

2. Analyze the notion that “the Cold War reflected American fears, rather than the reality of Soviet power.”
3. Analyse the proposition that “the period from the middle of the 1950s in the United States up to the impact of the crisis of the 1960s was an age of consensus.”
4. Analyse the objectives and tactics of a social or political movement of the 1960s and/or 1970s (feminism, gay rights, anti-war movement, Native American rights, Chicano movement, environmentalism, etc). What were the movement’s successes – and failures?
5. Discuss and analyse the ways in which the Vietnam War heightened social, political, and economic tensions in the United States in the period 1964-1973 and beyond.
6. Analyse resistance to the African American civil rights movement in the 1950s and 1960s.
7. Analyse the changes that occurred within the African American civil rights movement during the 1960s, paying attention to the goals and strategies of the movement.
8. Analyse the proposition that Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter sought to engineer America’s “retreat from empire.”
9. Analyse the proposition that, “After Goldwater led the party to a disastrous defeat, Nixon would be the only man available to act as party unifier, to lead the rehabilitation of Republicanism, and help himself at the same time.”
10. Analyse the proposition that “the 1980 election was a watershed election in American politics.”
11. Analyse the debate over abortion in the post-war United States, focusing particularly on the debate since the Supreme Court’s Roe vs. Wade decision.
12. Analyse the proposition that “the addition of AIDS to the political agenda was slow because of the way the problem was defined and the epidemic framed.”
13. Analyse the extent to which the Clinton presidency was beset by scandal.
14. You are welcome to devise your own topic on a relevant issue provided this is done in consultation with your tutor.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.
- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.
- Better appreciate the nature of argument, and the status and role of different kinds of historical sources and evidence.

- Work in an independent, adaptive, and self-motivated fashion, as well as interact effectively with others for a common outcome.
- Assess research problems, and seek out, organize, marshal, and deploy to best effect the relevant intellectual resources needed to solve those problems.

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Better appreciate the nature of argument, and the status and role of different kinds of historical sources and evidence.
- Work in an independent, adaptive, and self-motivated fashion, as well as interact effectively with others for a common outcome.
- Assess research problems, and seek out, organize, marshal, and deploy to best effect the relevant intellectual resources needed to solve those problems.

Assessment tasks

- Tutorial Participation
- Essay Plan and Bibliography

Capable of Professional and Personal Judgement and Initiative

We want our graduates to have emotional intelligence and sound interpersonal skills and to demonstrate discernment and common sense in their professional and personal judgement. They will exercise initiative as needed. They will be capable of risk assessment, and be able to handle ambiguity and complexity, enabling them to be adaptable in diverse and changing environments.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.

- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.
- Better appreciate the nature of argument, and the status and role of different kinds of historical sources and evidence.
- Work in an independent, adaptive, and self-motivated fashion, as well as interact effectively with others for a common outcome.

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.
- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.
- Better appreciate the nature of argument, and the status and role of different kinds of historical sources and evidence.

Critical, Analytical and Integrative Thinking

We want our graduates to be capable of reasoning, questioning and analysing, and to integrate and synthesise learning and knowledge from a range of sources and environments; to be able to critique constraints, assumptions and limitations; to be able to think independently and systemically in relation to scholarly activity, in the workplace, and in the world. We want them to have a level of scientific and information technology literacy.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.
- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.

Problem Solving and Research Capability

Our graduates should be capable of researching; of analysing, and interpreting and assessing data and information in various forms; of drawing connections across fields of knowledge; and they should be able to relate their knowledge to complex situations at work or in the world, in order to diagnose and solve problems. We want them to have the confidence to take the initiative in doing so, within an awareness of their own limitations.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.
- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.
- Better appreciate the nature of argument, and the status and role of different kinds of historical sources and evidence.

Effective Communication

We want to develop in our students the ability to communicate and convey their views in forms effective with different audiences. We want our graduates to take with them the capability to read, listen, question, gather and evaluate information resources in a variety of formats, assess, write clearly, speak effectively, and to use visual communication and communication technologies as appropriate.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.
- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Critically appreciate the major scholarly issues, debates, and interpretations in the field of modern United States history.
- Formulate complex ideas, defend and qualify them appropriately and civilly, and communicate them concisely, fluently, stylishly and compellingly, in both written and oral forms.
