Unit description

In this unit you will be introduced to the theory and practice of literacy studies from a social perspective. The subject draws on social theories and research in literacy and linguistics, with a particular focus on the sociolinguistics of language learning and multilingualism. The unit explores the nature of literacies, schooled and grassroots literacies, and literacies in their social, global, historical and technological contexts. Throughout the unit, participants are encouraged to reflect on literacies in their own fields of experience and how these relate to fair and equitable access to social goods such as education, employment, welfare or community participation.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Demonstrate an understanding of theoretical principles and recent developments in literacy research in a variety of social, global, historical and technological contexts.

Critically evaluate relevant theoretical and empirical literature in literacy research and discuss a range of approaches to literacy.

Identify and analyze the function of literacy in different communities and explore how diverse literacies relate to fair and equitable access to social goods such as education, employment, welfare or community participation.

Analyze and report on data relevant to the intersection between literacies and educational achievement.

Communicate to a professional audience advanced knowledge and understanding of socially relevant issues related to literacies.

General Assessment Information

Submission dates are non-negotiable. Late submissions will not be accepted and will attract a mark of 0 on the assessment task unless you have received special consideration.

How to apply for special consideration for a late submission of an assignment

All requests for special consideration, including extensions, must be submitted via ASK@mq.edu.au and provide suitable supporting documentation.

For more information on Special Consideration, see the university website: <https://students.mq.edu.au/study/my-study-program/special-consideration>
