Unit description

This unit is an overview of Egyptian society, economy and culture in the period from the Roman conquest of Egypt to the Fatimid period. Topics include: natural resources and the built environment; government and taxation; agriculture and trade; the structure of society; ethnicity; literacy and bilingualism (Greek, Demotic and the rise of Coptic); the growth and development of Christianity; and the fate of Egyptian Christianity in the centuries after the Arab conquest.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Identify evidence for the history and culture, and socio-economic and religious milieu in Egypt in the first millennium CE.

Assess sources within their historical context, to understand the characteristics of their particular type or genre.

Consider critically how discourses of cultural and religious interaction have shaped our view of the past.

Classify and interpret ancient documentary, literary, and artifactual material
Apply skills in using bibliographical resources, research tools, databases, and online resources to the study of the ancient world
Utilise communication skills appropriate to academic presentations and discussions

General Assessment Information

Marking criteria and standards

Guidelines on the criteria and standards required for assessment tasks, as well as rubrics where appropriate, will be placed on the iLearn site. Marks given for individual items of assessment are indicative only; final marks will be determined after moderation.

Assignment Submission

All written assignments will be submitted via Turnitin. You are required to present yourself for examination at the time and place designated in the University Examination Timetable. The only exception to sitting an examination at the designated time is because of documented illness or unavoidable disruption. In these circumstances, please consult University Policy for the available procedure.

Extensions

ALL deadlines are firm unless an extension has been requested in writing one (1) week before the due date. All requests for extensions must be submitted via ask.mq.edu.au and be supported by appropriate documentation. A penalty for lateness (see below) will apply unless a medical certificate or other written substantiation is supplied. Assignments handed in early will not be marked and returned before the due date. Always retain a copy of work you submit in case it is lost in the online system.

Late Submission Penalty

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – two (2) marks out of 100* will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments – e.g. quizzes, online tests.

*"100" is to be understood as 100% of the marks for that task, not the entire unit.

Satisfactory Completion of Unit

In order to complete this unit satisfactorily students must gain a mark of 50% or more, and attempt all assessment tasks.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Essay Plan	15%	No	24.3.19
Essay	40%	No	13.5.19
Exam	30%	No	Examination Period
Participation	15%	No	Weeks 1–13

Essay Plan

Due: 24.3.19

Weighting: 15%

The essay topics give you the topic for the essay: you must come up with the arguments you will use and the main sources on which you will base your essay.

In no more than 500 words, set out the main ancient evidence you will address in your essay, your key argument (i.e. a succinct response to the issue) and the three main propositions you will make, each supported by examples taken from the evidence. The propositions should be a paragraph each. An accompanying bibliography should provide full references for the ancient sources you will use, as well as a separate list of full references to any modern sources you refer to.

Refer in the first instance to the general works in the unit Leganto list, reading the companion and handbook entries or general works relevant to your topic to see what sources are cited by the authors, then consult the sources themselves to form your arguments. You may also look at the sources set for tutorials, but should attempt to go beyond these sources.

Your key argument and your three propositions should answer 'how' or 'why' questions, not merely describe what happened. You should only have an argument or proposition based on what happened if there is disagreement between sources or scholarly interpretation of them, and you are assessing the sources to make an argument about what you believe took place; even then, you should address how or why this happened, not merely provide a narrative.

The essay plan will be marked on the quality of questions or propositions developed, the suitability to the topic of the sources found, and written expression, including the format of references and bibliography. A Rubric will be provided on the iLearn site.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Identify evidence for the history and culture, and socio-economic and religious milieu in Egypt in the first millennium CE.
- Assess sources within their historical context, to understand the characteristics of their particular type or genre.

- Consider critically how discourses of cultural and religious interaction have shaped our view of the past.
- Classify and interpret ancient documentary, literary, and artifactual material
- Apply skills in using bibliographical resources, research tools, databases, and online resources to the study of the ancient world
- Utilise communication skills appropriate to academic presentations and discussions

Essay

Due: 13.5.19

Weighting: 40%

The major essay must be 2000 words (+/- 10%), and should develop the key arguments and propositions set out in your Essay plan (subject to any feedback on that task) into a full essay.

In its approach to argument and sources, the essay should mirror the instructions for the Essay plan: it should have a key argument about the topic, and at least three main propositions (which all contribute to the key argument) which are argued within the essay. These arguments should be based on your own reading of the ancient sources, except where you are assessing the argument made in a modern discussion (which will still be done on your own reading of the evidence). Do not cite modern sources where they are simply citing an ancient one: read the ancient source and cite that yourself. Cite modern sources where you are referring to the arguments they have made, and to provide references to where issues you are addressing are discussed in the modern literature.

Remember: your essay should answer 'how' or 'why' questions, not merely describe what happened. You should only have an argument or proposition based on what happened if there is disagreement between sources or scholarly interpretation of them, and you are assessing the sources to make an argument about what you believe took place; even then, you should address how or why this happened, not merely provide a narrative.

Essays must be accompanied by a bibliography of the ancient and modern sources used. They must be referenced according to one of the accepted conventions, that is, footnotes, endnotes, or 'in-text' referencing. In general, footnotes are the preferred and usual method for such work. The presentation of the essay should follow accepted scholarly practice. A guide to 'Essay Presentation & Conventions: Style Guide' is available, and this should be followed.

Essays will be assessed on the quality of the arguments, the use of ancient and modern sources, and written expression, including referencing and bibliography. A Rubric will be made available the unit iLearn page.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Identify evidence for the history and culture, and socio-economic and religious milieu in Egypt in the first millennium CE.

- Assess sources within their historical context, to understand the characteristics of their particular type or genre.
- Consider critically how discourses of cultural and religious interaction have shaped our view of the past.
- Classify and interpret ancient documentary, literary, and artifactual material
- Apply skills in using bibliographical resources, research tools, databases, and online resources to the study of the ancient world
- Utilise communication skills appropriate to academic presentations and discussions

Exam

Due: Examination Period

Weighting: 30%

There will be a two (2) hour examination during the exam period at the end of semester. Further guidance on the exam will be provided during the session.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Identify evidence for the history and culture, and socio-economic and religious milieu in Egypt in the first millennium CE.
- Assess sources within their historical context, to understand the characteristics of their particular type or genre.
- Consider critically how discourses of cultural and religious interaction have shaped our view of the past.
- Classify and interpret ancient documentary, literary, and artifactual material
- Utilise communication skills appropriate to academic presentations and discussions

Participation

Due: Weeks 1–13

Weighting: 15%

Fifteen percent (15%) of your mark will be based on your participation in Tutorials and Seminars. "Participation" is not assessed on the quality or length of the contribution, but simply on your participation in our discussions. Active participation which demonstrates your preparation and engagement with the themes of the tutorials and seminars is the best way of ensuring full marks for this task, which helps build crucial communication skills.

For internal students, it is naturally impossible to participate in the discussion if one does not attend the tutorials or seminars. Attendance of Tutorials and Seminars is thus required. External students will be assessed based on their posts to the discussion fora for each tutorial and seminar. Note that internal students cannot fulfil their participation requirements by posting on the iLearn discussion fora.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Identify evidence for the history and culture, and socio-economic and religious milieu in Egypt in the first millennium CE.
- Consider critically how discourses of cultural and religious interaction have shaped our view of the past.
- Classify and interpret ancient documentary, literary, and artifactual material
- Utilise communication skills appropriate to academic presentations and discussions

Delivery and Resources

Lectures, Seminars, and Tutorials

The lectures in this unit will cover the history of first millennium Egypt, concentrating on political and religious developments in this period. In the seminars, students will discuss as a cohort issues pertaining to our interpretation and study of ancient Egypt; there will be small amount of reading each week for seminars, but the discussion will mainly be based on students' personal reflections on the issues under discussion that week. Tutorials will focus on interpretation of the ancient sources, with a number of ancient sources, sometimes accompanied by related modern discussions of them, to be read each week.

- Lectures for this unit will take place every Thursday from 9–10am in 11 Wallys Walk - 160 Tutorial Room.
 - The lectures will be recorded for external students and placed on the Echo360 System along with the Lecture slides.
- Seminars for this unit will take place every Thursday from 10–11am in 11 Wallys Walk - 160 Tutorial Room.
 - Seminars will not be recorded: a weekly video webinar with associated discussion forum on the unit iLearn site will take the place of the seminars for external students.
- Tutorials for this unit will take place every Thursday from 1–2pm in 11 Wallys Walk - 160 Tutorial Room.
 - Tutorials will not be recorded: a weekly discussion forum on the unit iLearn site will take the place of the tutorials for external students.

Attendance (internal students)

As the lectures are recorded, attendance at them is not mandatory. However, students may find it difficult to engage in the seminars and especially the tutorials if they have not listened to the lecture before they attend the seminar and tutorial. Participation in seminars and tutorials forms part of the unit assessment, so students who do not attend will lose marks: attendance at seminars and tutorials is therefore strongly encouraged. Note that internal students cannot fulfil their participation requirements by posting on the iLearn discussion fora.

Readings

There is no textbook for this unit. Required readings will be available via Leganto on the Macquarie University Library Website, and on the iLearn page.

Technology Used

The unit has an iLearn page which can be accessed at <https://ilearn.mq.edu.au/login/index.php>. PC and internet access are therefore required. Basic computer skills (e.g., internet browsing) and skills in word processing are also a requirement. Material for this unit may be delivered via the unit iLearn page. The lectures will be recorded for external students.

Graduate Capabilities

Creative and Innovative

Our graduates will also be capable of creative thinking and of creating knowledge. They will be imaginative and open to experience and capable of innovation at work and in the community. We want them to be engaged in applying their critical, creative thinking.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Assess sources within their historical context, to understand the characteristics of their particular type or genre.
- Consider critically how discourses of cultural and religious interaction have shaped our view of the past.

- Classify and interpret ancient documentary, literary, and artifactual material
- Utilise communication skills appropriate to academic presentations and discussions

Discipline Specific Knowledge and Skills

Our graduates will take with them the intellectual development, depth and breadth of knowledge, scholarly understanding, and specific subject content in their chosen fields to make them competent and confident in their subject or profession. They will be able to demonstrate, where relevant, professional technical competence and meet professional standards. They will be able to articulate the structure of knowledge of their discipline, be able to adapt discipline-specific knowledge to novel situations, and be able to contribute from their discipline to inter-disciplinary solutions to problems.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Identify evidence for the history and culture, and socio-economic and religious milieu in Egypt in the first millennium CE.

- Assess sources within their historical context, to understand the characteristics of their particular type or genre.
- Consider critically how discourses of cultural and religious interaction have shaped our view of the past.

Engaged and Ethical Local and Global citizens

As local citizens our graduates will be aware of indigenous perspectives and of the nation's historical context. They will be engaged with the challenges of contemporary society and with knowledge and ideas. We want our graduates to have respect for diversity, to be open-minded, sensitive to others and inclusive, and to be open to other cultures and perspectives: they should have a level of cultural literacy. Our graduates should be aware of disadvantage and social justice, and be willing to participate to help create a wiser and better society.

This graduate capability is supported by:

Learning outcomes

- Assess sources within their historical context, to understand the characteristics of their particular type or genre.
- Consider critically how discourses of cultural and religious interaction have shaped our view of the past.
