Unit description

This unit focuses on language, including variation in grammar, usage and punctuation, and linguistic approaches to writing style, discourse development and readability. It examines the features of different text types, spoken and written, as well as those evolving on the internet. It discusses communicative approaches to writing, including plain English for mediating complex content, and promotional writing for advertising purposes. It includes modules on editing Aboriginal English, and on academic writing and editing, especially theses and journal articles.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Full awareness of the parameters of language with which writers and editors work

Familiarity with alternative linguistic styles and forms of communication

Ability to assess manuscripts for readability, and to suggest measures for their enhancement

Ability to write for particular audiences and purposes

Familiarity with the demands and limits of editing academic theses

General Assessment Information

How to apply for a late submission of an assignment

All requests for special consideration, including extensions, must be submitted via ASK.mq.edu.au and provide suitable supporting documentation

Late Assignment Submission

- Late submissions without an extension will receive a penalty of 5% of the total mark available for the assignment per day.
- Late submission of an assignment without an extension will not be permitted after marks have been released to the rest of the class.
- Extensions will only be given in special circumstances, and can be requested by completing the Special Consideration request at ask.mq.edu.au and providing the requisite supporting documentation.
- For more information on Special Consideration, see the university website <https://students.mq.edu.au/study/my-study-program/special-consideration>
- Assignments submitted after the deadline, regardless of the reason, will be marked and returned at a date determined by the unit convenor.
- Extensions cannot continue beyond the start of the following semester, and students should be aware that long extensions may impact graduation dates

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Online discussion 1	20%	No	01/09/19
Punctuation	20%	No	06/10/19
Online discussion 2	20%	No	27/10/19
Practical work (2 options)	40%	No	17/11/19

Online discussion 1

Due: 01/09/19

Weighting: 20%

The first assessable discussion of this unit focuses on nominal style and the extent to which nominalizations are essential to the discipline or type of discourse, or unnecessary to it. Your task is to find:

- (i) a short paragraph in which nominalizations are part of the professional language of writers in the discipline (= essential nominalizations)
- (ii) a short paragraph in which nominalizations are unnecessary for the communication, or perhaps a deliberate strategy to mask difficult information which will be unwelcome, for whatever reason (= nonessential nominalizations)

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Full awareness of the parameters of language with which writers and editors work
- Familiarity with alternative linguistic styles and forms of communication
- Ability to assess manuscripts for readability, and to suggest measures for their enhancement
- Ability to write for particular audiences and purposes
- Familiarity with the demands and limits of editing academic theses

Punctuation

Due: 06/10/19

Weighting: 20%

Your punctuation assignment is to repunctuate 2 short passages which have had all their punctuation removed, and to provide a rationale for the decisions you make.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Full awareness of the parameters of language with which writers and editors work
- Familiarity with alternative linguistic styles and forms of communication
- Ability to write for particular audiences and purposes

Online discussion 2

Due: 27/10/19

Weighting: 20%

Your task is to find two short pieces of electronic communication (say 2 to 3 sentences each), which contrast spoken and written styles of English as much as possible. They can be taken from any of the electronic media you access regularly.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Full awareness of the parameters of language with which writers and editors work
- Familiarity with alternative linguistic styles and forms of communication

- Ability to write for particular audiences and purposes

Practical work (2 options)

Due: 17/11/19

Weighting: 40%

OPTION 1: Promotional writing

Choose any two books, one (a) from the general trade area of publishing, the other (b) from the professional/educational area.

For each of them, write copy for

- the banner for electronic advertising
- the feature line for a single-page advertisement (or the front side of a leaflet/flyer). You should also indicate in a couple of sentences what graphics you'd suggest to go with the feature line, to support the intended message and ensure its impact.
- two or three paragraphs for the back cover of the book

OPTION 2: Scholarly editing

Project yourself into the role of an editorial project manager responsible for producing an anthology of scholarly articles in a particular field (in print or online).

Your task is to create a cohesive collection of fresh papers in a specialized field with which you are familiar. Such papers often appear first in the “working papers” of a university or academic discipline, and are easily found on the web via a Google search >> working papers education/ geography/ linguistics. You should select five interesting papers from at least two different sources publishing during the last five years, to make a coherent set with a common topic or theme.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Familiarity with alternative linguistic styles and forms of communication
- Ability to write for particular audiences and purposes

Delivery and Resources

Students will require Internet access with a reliable web browser and e-mail facility, and must be able to play back recorded lectures (audio only).
