Unit description

This unit aims to provide students with professional understanding of the relations between work and wellbeing, and appropriate skills for better management of these relations. The unit covers applications of research to such practical matters as job analysis, job design, and stress management. The unit brings together theory, methodology and workplace issues to provide a sound underpinning for professional practice in industrial and organisational psychology.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Able to distinguish between different aspects of well-being

Know theories about the nature, causes, and impact of work stress, motivation and engagement

Able to apply employee wellbeing theories, models and research findings to practical situations

Understand practical and ethical challenges surrounding workplace stress management

Know theory and practice associated with designing and re-designing work

Know the strengths, limitations and applications of different job analysis techniques

Able to competently undertake a range of job analysis techniques for different purposes

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Attendance and Participation	0%	No	ongoing
Online Quiz	20%	No	TBA
IOP Competence Evaluations	10%	Yes	Ongoing
Organisational Diagnosis	30%	No	TBA
Examination	40%	No	Final week (see timetable)

Attendance and Participation

Due: ongoing

Weighting: 0%

Students are expected to attend all on-campus classes. Learning objectives and assessment activities are based on the requirement of a minimum 80% class attendance.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Able to competently undertake a range of job analysis techniques for different purposes

Online Quiz

Due: TBA

Weighting: 20%

Weekly quizzes encourage you to keep a regular routine of watching the lecture videos each week, and to provide you with feedback about how much of the video content you remember and understand. You can access quizzes via the unit iLearn website. Quizzes must be completed independently, without any collaboration with others. Each quiz will be available for a limited time – typically it will expire at the start of the relevant class. It is not possible to re-open a quiz for individual students who missed the quiz deadline.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Able to distinguish between different aspects of well-being
- Know theories about the nature, causes, and impact of work stress, motivation and engagement
- Able to apply employee wellbeing theories, models and research findings to practical situations

- Know theory and practice associated with designing and re-designing work
- Know the strengths, limitations and applications of different job analysis techniques

IOP Competence Evaluations

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 10%

This is a hurdle assessment task (see assessment policy for more information on hurdle assessment tasks)

You will be regularly asked to undertake activities involving the application of knowledge covered in the online lectures or set readings. The unit chair will assess your competence while you perform these activities, or after you have completed them. Competent performance will earn 2% in each of the 5 classes.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Able to distinguish between different aspects of well-being
- Know theories about the nature, causes, and impact of work stress, motivation and engagement
- Able to apply employee wellbeing theories, models and research findings to practical situations
- Know the strengths, limitations and applications of different job analysis techniques
- Able to competently undertake a range of job analysis techniques for different purposes

Organisational Diagnosis

Due: TBA

Weighting: 30%

Working from a case study, you will provide a diagnosis of an organisation's problems that should be the focus of a wellbeing intervention.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Able to distinguish between different aspects of well-being
- Know theories about the nature, causes, and impact of work stress, motivation and engagement
- Able to apply employee wellbeing theories, models and research findings to practical situations
- Understand practical and ethical challenges surrounding workplace stress management
- Know theory and practice associated with designing and re-designing work

Examination

Due: Final week (see timetable)

Weighting: 40%

There will be a 60 minute written exam (excluding reading time) held in the final class for the unit (currently scheduled as Week 12). This exam is designed to test your understanding of content covered in the unit and your capacity to apply this knowledge meaningfully when handling practical workplace problems. You will be presented with situations based on real consultancy work and decision-making experiences encountered by organisational psychologists, and you will need to use your knowledge of I/O psychology (particularly that gained from this unit) to answer questions. All content from on-campus classes, required lecture videos, and recommended readings is examinable.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Able to distinguish between different aspects of well-being
- Know theories about the nature, causes, and impact of work stress, motivation and engagement
- Able to apply employee wellbeing theories, models and research findings to practical situations
- Know theory and practice associated with designing and re-designing work
- Know the strengths, limitations and applications of different job analysis techniques

Delivery and Resources

The unit is largely taught using the "flip" approach. Face-to-face classes are held, but only in even weeks. To prepare for the classes, we provide content via iLearn -- video lectures to watch, articles to read, and activities to perform, help you understand theories and concepts, so that the on-campus classes can focus on practical activities and discussions where you utilise that knowledge to develop competence.

Unit Schedule

See unit outline and Macquarie University online timetable.
