Unit description

This unit provides an advanced introduction to politics and public policy. It begins by focussing on key institutions and actors and critically analyses their role and influence. In the second half of the unit, current debates and controversies are considered. This includes issues around reform, governance, globalisation and changes to the policy environment.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Explain and critically analyse the way in which power and politics impact on public policy and the policy process.

Identify the range of actors and institutions involved in the policy process, using the Australian example as the basis for comparison with other policy environments.

Analyse the role of different actors and institutions in influencing policy in networks, subsystems or communities.

Identify, critically analyse and discuss the major debates and controversies involved in this subject, including debates around the proper role of government, the shift from government to governance, the impact of globalisation, and the role of public and interest group participation in the policy process.

Recognise, understand and apply the most common theoretical approaches used in studying politics and policy, and identify differences and similarities between them.

Analyse the policy-making process using several different models, or theories, and critically evaluate these by applying them to real-world case studies, and demonstrating their strengths and weaknesses.

Locate, assess, and analyse different kinds of evidence about the policy process, from a range of sources, and synthesise research findings into a simple, logical and coherent argument.

General Assessment Information

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – two (2) marks out of 100 will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments – e.g. quizzes, online tests

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Quizzes	40%	No	TBA
Seminar Participation	10%	No	Weekly
Take-home exam	50%	No	TBA

Quizzes

Due: TBA

Weighting: 40%

These quizzes will be held in various seminars (8 quizzes worth 5% each) throughout the semester. They will be based on material covered in the key readings and lectures, and the details in relation to which lectures they will be held in will not be announced prior to each lecture, meaning that you will not know in advance whether a quiz will be held in a given seminar. This is designed to ensure maximum participation in the course and maximum achievement in the quizzes. More information about the quizzes will be provided in the first lecture and seminar.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Identify the range of actors and institutions involved in the policy process, using the Australian example as the basis for comparison with other policy environments.

Seminar Participation

Due: Weekly

Weighting: 10%

Students enrolling in an on-campus course are expected to have the capacity and commitment to attend seminars. They should be prepared to devote approximately 10 hours per week to each course. These 10 hours include lecture and tutorial attendance, undertaking weekly readings, miscellaneous study activities and assignment preparation and completion.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Explain and critically analyse the way in which power and politics impact on public policy and the policy process.
- Identify the range of actors and institutions involved in the policy process, using the Australian example as the basis for comparison with other policy environments.
- Analyse the role of different actors and institutions in influencing policy in networks, subsystems or communities.
- Identify, critically analyse and discuss the major debates and controversies involved in this subject, including debates around the proper role of government, the shift from government to governance, the impact of globalisation, and the role of public and interest group participation in the policy process.
- Recognise, understand and apply the most common theoretical approaches used in studying politics and policy, and identify differences and similarities between them.
- Analyse the policy-making process using several different models, or theories, and critically evaluate these by applying them to real-world case studies, and demonstrating their strengths and weaknesses.
- Locate, assess, and analyse different kinds of evidence about the policy process, from a range of sources, and synthesise research findings into a simple, logical and coherent argument.

Take-home exam

Due: TBA

Weighting: 50%

This exam consists of short answer and essay questions and students will have one week to respond to the questions. Answers are to be submitted via Turnitin. More details to come in the first lecture and throughout the semester.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Explain and critically analyse the way in which power and politics impact on public policy and the policy process.
- Identify the range of actors and institutions involved in the policy process, using the Australian example as the basis for comparison with other policy environments.
- Analyse the role of different actors and institutions in influencing policy in networks, subsystems or communities.
- Identify, critically analyse and discuss the major debates and controversies involved in this subject, including debates around the proper role of government, the shift from government to governance, the impact of globalisation, and the role of public and interest group participation in the policy process.
- Recognise, understand and apply the most common theoretical approaches used in studying politics and policy, and identify differences and similarities between them.
- Analyse the policy-making process using several different models, or theories, and critically evaluate these by applying them to real-world case studies, and demonstrating their strengths and weaknesses.
