Unit description

This unit examines the ways in which trade and environment issues are addressed in a variety of international legal instruments, ranging from, the United Nations through to global and regional free trade agreements. It provides an overview of international institutions, policies and instruments such as the UN, GATT, the WTO, NAFTA, the World Bank and the IMF as they relate to environmental issues. It also, where appropriate, compares the achievements of one legal instrument with those of others in the area of trade and the environment. It particularly focuses on the interests and concerns of developing countries on this pressing issue.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

Explain and critique linkages between international environmental law and international trade law. Construct an enquiring, critical and creative approach to the existing debates and tensions surrounding the trade-environment nexus

Critique key institutions and actors through which international environmental law and international trade law interact

Explain and critically assess how law, politics and the self-interest of nation-states play a critical role in the inter-relationship of trade, environment and sustainable development

Evaluate the relationship between trade-related economic growth and the environmental impacts in the pursuit for sustainable development, especially as related to the interests of developing countries

Assess where the relationship between international environmental law and international trade law can be expected to develop in the future, especially having regard to the objectives of sustainable development and making recommendations for policy development and institutional reform

General Assessment Information

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – two (2) marks out of 100 will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments – e.g. quizzes, online tests.

Synopsis

Due: 15 April 2019

Weighting: 10%

This is a hurdle assessment task (see assessment policy for more information on hurdle assessment tasks)

This is a thought provoking exercise intended to stimulate students to work out an appropriate proposal of research that relates to their research paper. However, students who are unable to select a topic of research and to formulate a research proposal may be assisted. They are advised to approach the Convenor after exhausting their own sincere efforts. Each student is required to submit a 1,500 word (excluding footnotes and bibliography) outline of their research topic, including a literature review. Further instructions will be provided on the unit iLearn page.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Explain and critique linkages between international environmental law and international trade law. Construct an enquiring, critical and creative approach to the existing debates and tensions surrounding the trade-environment nexus

Assignment

Due: 29 April 2019

Weighting: 30%

This is a hurdle assessment task (see assessment policy for more information on hurdle assessment tasks)

This 2500-word assignment (excluding footnotes and bibliography) will involve answering a set question provided to all students within the first two weeks of the semester. Students will be assessed on their understanding and explanation of the legal issues presented, the depth of their research as well as their critical evaluation of the relevant issues. Research should extend beyond the prescribed books and course materials (the recommended books and journals provide a starting point for further research). Clarity of expression, presentation of the argument, responsiveness to questions, and correct and consistent reference style will also be taken into account. The paper should be well structured including sub-headings where appropriate. The introduction should set out the scope of the paper. Students need to include sufficient detail of the specific legal principles or regime and analysis/application of that law. Be sure to answer the question asked. The conclusion should include recommendations for law reform, further research and/or creative application of the existing law where appropriate. The assignment should be fully referenced according to the Australian Guide to Legal Citation.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Explain and critique linkages between international environmental law and international trade law. Construct an enquiring, critical and creative approach to the existing debates and tensions surrounding the trade-environment nexus
- Critique key institutions and actors through which international environmental law and international trade law interact

Research Paper

Due: 10 June 2019

Weighting: 50%

This is a hurdle assessment task (see assessment policy for more information on hurdle assessment tasks)

Students will be required to prepare a 3500 word (excluding footnotes and bibliography) research paper that builds on the Synopsis (same topic) submitted earlier in the semester.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Explain and critique linkages between international environmental law and international trade law. Construct an enquiring, critical and creative approach to the existing debates and tensions surrounding the trade-environment nexus
- Critique key institutions and actors through which international environmental law and international trade law interact
- Explain and critically assess how law, politics and the self-interest of nation-states play a critical role in the inter-relationship of trade, environment and sustainable development
- Evaluate the relationship between trade-related economic growth and the environmental impacts in the pursuit for sustainable development, especially as related to the interests of developing countries
- Assess where the relationship between international environmental law and international trade law can be expected to develop in the future, especially having regard to the objectives of sustainable development and making recommendations for policy development and institutional reform

Class Participation

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 10%

This is a hurdle assessment task (see assessment policy for more information on hurdle assessment tasks)

Students will be assessed on the quality of their contributions to class discussion during intensive sessions based on their demonstrated understanding of the readings, and application of their knowledge and principles to the weekly topic.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Explain and critique linkages between international environmental law and international trade law. Construct an enquiring, critical and creative approach to the existing debates and tensions surrounding the trade-environment nexus
- Critique key institutions and actors through which international environmental law and international trade law interact
- Explain and critically assess how law, politics and the self-interest of nation-states play a critical role in the inter-relationship of trade, environment and sustainable development

- Evaluate the relationship between trade-related economic growth and the environmental impacts in the pursuit for sustainable development, especially as related to the interests of developing countries
- Assess where the relationship between international environmental law and international trade law can be expected to develop in the future, especially having regard to the objectives of sustainable development and making recommendations for policy development and institutional reform

Delivery and Resources

This unit is delivered as a block mode. There will be a one hour recorded lecture for each topic and face to face tutorial (23-24 April) during intensive sessions on campus.

Further information about the course will be available on the unit iLearn page from the start of the semester.

All assessments are to be submitted online using the Turnitin links provided on the unit iLearn page.
