Unit description

This unit will explore the development and practice of textual analysis, ranging from ideas of the canon and interdisciplinarity in literary reception and interpretation, to formal, linguistic, cultural and cognitive approaches to textual meaning making. This unit will provide a suitable grounding in research and conceptual framing for students undertaking advanced studies in English and writing. Students will be introduced to, and encouraged to practice, a range of different types of textual analysis on a small group of renowned recent novels.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

- A. Develop analytical and research skills that enable confident oral and written engagement with a range of debates in textual studies
- B. Build a foundation of research skills to prepare for further study
- C. Undertake accomplished close reading of a range of texts, and develop a strong critical understanding of the value of close reading for building evidence in analytical arguments

- D. Understand the relationship between the primary texts and their historical, intertextual, and ideological contexts, and the value of this relationship
- E. Engage in confident and appropriate application of relevant theoretical concepts and interpretative frameworks to the primary texts studied, and understand the intellectual, ethical, and ideological implications of applying these concepts and frameworks
- F. Ability to engage in informed critical discussion in oral form with peers and teachers, accommodate others' points of view
- G. Ability to apply understanding of analytical methods to literary study and beyond to other situations
