Unit description

This unit is designed for students who are interested in language for specific purposes, as either a second language or a foreign language. The focus is on analysis of the socio-cultural contexts associated with business, professional and vocational areas and the specific characteristics of both oral and written text types associated with them. Such information is essential in evaluating appropriate materials and assessment tasks for teaching language for specific purposes. Students will have the opportunity to specialise in particular vocational or professional areas in assignments.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://students.mq.edu.au/important-dates>

Learning Outcomes

ULO1: Discuss the main historical trends in LSP since the 1960s to explain how they have impacted LSP teaching and learning

ULO2: Apply LSP theory to practical issues related to teaching LSP

ULO3: Draw on principles of needs analysis and discourse analysis to analyzing specific language learning contexts and specific contexts of language use.

ULO4: Articulate a coherent conception of the features of oral and written texts associated with particular professions and business and vocational contexts to the selection of appropriate curricula, materials and assessment practices in the context of teaching LSP.

ULO5: Reflect on an LSP context of interest to discuss the merits of different approaches to researching that site.

ULO6: Collaborate with others in the unit and provide informed feedback to peers.
