Unit description

Alexander the Great's extraordinary conquests (334-323 BCE) opened up vast areas of the ancient Near East to Greek influences. This Unit deals with the political and cultural history of the eastern Mediterranean and the Near East, beginning with the death of Alexander. It follows the fortunes of his successors in the third and second centuries BCE, the developments brought on for both Greeks and those they conquered, the "hellenisation" of local peoples, and reactions to cultural change, down to the end of the first century BCE, under the Roman Empire.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: demonstrate awareness of a variety of ancient text types and other ancient sources relevant to the aftermath of the career of Alexander the Great, and the political, social and cultural history of the subsequent Hellenistic period.

ULO3: contextualise particular ancient documents and other sources of information within their wider cultural environment.

ULO2: demonstrate an awareness of the differing kinds of ancient evidence (including textual, epigraphic, numismatic and archaeological evidence) and appropriate methods for dealing with them.

ULO4: demonstrate a comprehension of ancient world-views and cultural concepts

ULO5: express an awareness of the complexity of ancient accounts of past events and experiences

ULO6: conduct independent research on a chosen topic

ULO7: engage with and respond critically to a variety of scholarly opinions

ULO8: formulate an independent view in dialogue with both ancient evidence and modern interpretations

Changes from Previous Offering

The previous convenor of the unit, Dr Chris Forbes, retired at the end of 2019, at which time the regular internal/external offering of the unit was cancelled. However, the AHIX version needs to be taught for the last time in 2020. That being the case, Prof. Ian Worthington agreed to act as convenor on the understanding that everything to do with assignments, including marking, will be handled by casual staff.

The names of such staff will be put onto the iLearn Syllabus of this unit.
