Unit description

This unit provides foundation skills required for working in a medical science laboratory. Skills will be learnt in the context of current global health issues including antimicrobial resistance and malaria, health reporters such as immunity and haematology and approaches to disease diagnosis. Students will acquire hands-on laboratory skills, including aseptic technique for microbiological and DNA analyses, use of microscopes, and data collection and analysis. Students will hear from medical scientists and medical researchers who will provide context for the weekly skills topics and information on the diverse employment areas in medical science. Students also begin to acquire skills in interpreting and citing scientific literature and developing a foundation in communication skills and scientific writing.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Articulate and practice appropriate health, safety and ethical standards relevant to medical science

ULO2: Describe global health issues of significance to society today using appropriate scientific terminology

ULO3: Develop and demonstrate competencies in standard laboratory techniques (e.g. dilutions, aseptic technique, imagery and measurement, labelling, diagnostic sample preparation)

ULO4: Describe and practice scientific methods from generating hypotheses and predictions to designing experimental procedures, and undertaking data collection

ULO5: Develop competency in working individually or as a team in the laboratory and tutorials

Assessment Tasks

Coronavirus (COVID-19) Update

Assessment details are no longer provided here as a result of changes due to the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic.

Students should consult iLearn for revised unit information.

Find out more about the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\) and potential impacts on staff and students

General Assessment Information

- Competence with skills, data analyses and interpretation, and preparation of scientific reports are the main forms of assessment in BIOL1620.
- Attendance at practical sessions is a required to pass this unit.
- Detailed information for each assessment and marking criteria are outlined under the assessment tabs in iLearn.
- All assessments are submitted via Turnitin which evaluates your assessment against that of other students in this years course and previous years, literature, websites etc. Turnitin then provides a similarity score that is used as a measure of plagiarism (see Academic Integrity policy in tab below).
- Assessments (including quizzes) are your own work.

Delivery and Resources

Coronavirus (COVID-19) Update

Any references to on-campus delivery below may no longer be relevant due to COVID-19.

Please check here for updated delivery information: https://ask.mq.edu.au/account/pub/display/unit\_status

LECTURES: BIOL1620 comprises weekly lectures that cover hot topics in Health and Disease. While we understand that clashes may prevent you from attending lectures we find that students who attend lectures get the best out of the subjects. Lecturers are guests and represent the best in their fields, they are taking time out of their work to talk to you, so please do your best to attend the lectures.

TUTORIAL AND PRACTICAL CLASSES: It is compulsory to attend the weekly block classes which begin with a tutorial followed by the practical session. A role will be taken to record attendance and to identify your participation in these classes.
