Co-badged status
Unit description Systematic reviews play an increasingly important role in evidence-based practice. Conducting systematic reviews is considered an important skill for education researchers. Students will be introduced to the process of writing a systematic review and other methods of systematic research synthesis. Established procedures such as those identified by the EPPI-Centre and the Cochrane Collaboration will be used to demonstrate how to conduct high quality reviews of studies using quantitative and/or qualitative methods. Students will select an area of education research that is of interest and write a systematic review.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>
