Unit description

Recent surveys of popular historical awareness have demonstrated that most people find out about the past from film and television, yet visual histories are often criticised for the ways they present the past. This unit will consider the limitations and possibilities of history on screen. Do filmic histories represent a more 'authentic' engagement with the past, or do they peddle false versions of history to a gullible public? How might we read historical films and television programs carefully and critically to understand diverse historical interpretations? This unit will develop student's understandings of the critical study of history on film, examining the ways that all historical texts (including films) make arguments about the past. The unit will examine cinematic and televisual representations of Australian, American and British histories.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Locate historical films and television programs within the context of their production.

ULO2: Demonstrate understanding of the ways that films and television programs produce interpretations of the past.

ULO3: Conceptualise and create an original research project by presenting a coherent historical argument that is situated in the relevant historiography.

ULO4: Successfully undertake independent primary and secondary historical research.

ULO5: Develop and apply a critical vocabulary for the analysis of film and televisual materials as primary sources.

General Assessment Information

Unless a Special Consideration request has been submitted and approved, (a) a penalty for lateness will apply – two (2) marks out of 100 will be deducted per day for assignments submitted after the due date – and (b) no assignment will be accepted more than seven (7) days (incl. weekends) after the original submission deadline. No late submissions will be accepted for timed assessments – e.g. quizzes, online tests.

Note: written assessment tasks are always due by midnight on the specified date.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Research Project Proposal	20%	No	6/11/20
Weekly reading journal	20%	No	complete weekly, due 10/11/20
Active class participation	10%	No	Across semester
Research essay	50%	No	6/11/20

Research Project Proposal

Assessment Type ¹: Plan

Indicative Time on Task ²: 23 hours

Due: 6/11/20

Weighting: 20%

This task will assess your ability to develop a research question and approach, as well as your ability to locate and analyse primary and secondary sources. You will respond to a series of questions to prepare the proposal.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Locate historical films and television programs within the context of their production.
- Demonstrate understanding of the ways that films and television programs produce interpretations of the past.
- Conceptualise and create an original research project by presenting a coherent historical argument that is situated in the relevant historiography.
- Successfully undertake independent primary and secondary historical research.
- Develop and apply a critical vocabulary for the analysis of film and televisual materials as primary sources.

Weekly reading journal

Assessment Type 1: Reflective Writing

Indicative Time on Task 2: 5 hours

Due: complete weekly, due 10/11/20

Weighting: 20%

This task evaluates your understanding of the weekly film and the essential readings. Each week, students will complete a short (approx 250-300 words) outlining the core argument of the essential readings and analysing the way the set screen text represents history. The reading journal must be completed for 11 of the 13 weeks of the unit.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Locate historical films and television programs within the context of their production.
- Demonstrate understanding of the ways that films and television programs produce interpretations of the past.
- Develop and apply a critical vocabulary for the analysis of film and televisual materials as primary sources.

Active class participation

Assessment Type 1: Participatory task

Indicative Time on Task 2: hours

Due: Across semester

Weighting: 10%

students will be assessed on their engaged and active contributions to class discussions and activities, either in iLearn discussion forums or in zoom video conference tutorial sessions. Students will be assessed on the quality of their contributions and their willingness to productively engage with the views and ideas of others.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Locate historical films and television programs within the context of their production.
- Demonstrate understanding of the ways that films and television programs produce interpretations of the past.
- Develop and apply a critical vocabulary for the analysis of film and televisual materials as primary sources.

Research essay

Assessment Type ¹: Essay

Indicative Time on Task ²: 50 hours

Due: 6/11/20

Weighting: 50%

This assessment task evaluates student's ability to construct an argument in response to a self-devised research question, based on primary and secondary sources. This task is the culmination of the assessment tasks in this unit; all previous assessments provide "scaffolding" for this final task.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Locate historical films and television programs within the context of their production.
- Demonstrate understanding of the ways that films and television programs produce interpretations of the past.
- Conceptualise and create an original research project by presenting a coherent historical argument that is situated in the relevant historiography.
- Successfully undertake independent primary and secondary historical research.
- Develop and apply a critical vocabulary for the analysis of film and televisual materials as primary sources.

¹ If you need help with your assignment, please contact:

- the academic teaching staff in your unit for guidance in understanding or completing this type of assessment
- the Writing Centre for academic skills support.

² Indicative time-on-task is an estimate of the time required for completion of the assessment task and is subject to individual variation

Delivery and Resources

Delivery:

this unit is taught through a combination of a lecture, a film screening and asynchronous, online tutorial discussions - the lecture and film screening will be available online, and you must listen to the lecture and watch the film before you participate in the online discussions.

Resources:

All the required readings for MHIS303 are available via the MHIS303 iLearn site or directly through the University Library. You do not require any textbooks.

The library holds most of the required films for this unit, as well as a large number of other films you will find useful or relevant. You can also access many films through your online rental or streaming services. You may have to purchase access to one or two of the film texts we study in the unit.
