Unit description

What does world history look like from an Indigenous perspective? In world history Indigenous people's historical experiences are often overlooked or eclipsed by non-Indigenous stories. This unit privileges Indigenous historical experience, recovering their deep histories to the present and reassessing the historical connections between Indigenous and non-Indigenous histories. From an Australian vantage point we explore key themes including pre-contact societies, environmental knowledge and heritage, migration and mobility, cultures, contacts and accommodations and other responses to invasion and survival, including contemporary politics and challenges.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: understand key themes in Indigenous historical experience from pre-contact to today.

ULO2: understand Australian Indigenous history through a world Indigenous history lens.

ULO3: think critically and analytically about Indigenous historical experience.

ULO4: interpret a variety of historical sources including art, biography, dance and story.

ULO5: communicate effectively in oral, written and digital forms.

General Assessment Information

Apart from this unit guide all assessments for this unit are clearly identified and detailed instructions provided in ilearn. Please consult the ilearn homepage and take the time to scroll through it, paying particular attention to the dedicated section on assessment.

Late Submission Policy
