Unit description

What constitutes research in the fields of literary studies and creative writing? This unit considers the various contexts within which English literature is studied and composed, in order to encourage critical awareness of how and why these studies are pursued in the twenty-first century. This unit will introduce students to a wide range of recent debates in literary studies and creative writing, focusing upon the areas that lie at the centre of literary and creative research in the English Department at Macquarie University. Students will analyse and evaluate critical studies of literary works and conceptual approaches to creative research to consider how literature operates both conceptually and in the real world.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Comprehend the range of approaches to literary studies and creative writing that are pursued by researchers within the English department.

ULO2: Enhance the design and development of research, especially with regard to aligning their ideas with relevant approaches within the field.

ULO3: Use well developed judgement to develop research questions.

ULO4: Write and present a minor piece of research related to a chosen field of enquiry in the discipline of literary studies.
