Unit description This unit will provide hands-on experience of several of the sophisticated technologies currently utilised in molecular science. Students will select a portfolio of techniques across chemistry, biochemistry, biophysics, genomics or microbiology, according to their discipline background and interest. Independent skills and technical competency in a minimum of three contemporary methodologies or instrumentation types will be developed through intensive practical sessions with Macquarie researchers. This is a skills-focused unit designed to practically enrich methods encountered from a more theoretical standpoint in other units.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

- ULO1: Utilise appropriate practical and procedural knowledge to perform advanced methods in contemporary molecular research and describe how these methods are used to solve contemporary problems
- ULO2: Demonstrate individual technical skills in sample handling and instrumentation relevant to the research (as distinct from classroom) setting for their chosen methods
- ULO3: Execute independent analytical and critical skills required for scientific experimentation and research design allowing to implement the correct methodology to characterise a specific type of sample

ULO4: Analyse experimental data gathered from a range of research technologies and communicate the outcomes of this analysis in written and oral form

Assessment Tasks
