Unit description This unit explores the transformation of human society as a result of information technology development. Exploring these transformations, students will apply communications theories and concepts to global network systems; and the politics and economics informing technological changes. Students are expected to apply theories and concepts learned in this unit to analyse and critique cases. Unit content links disciplinary knowledge and skills to career pathways.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: analyse and apply disciplinary knowledge of theories and concepts to issues related to information technology development.

ULO2: synthesize disciplinary knowledge across diverse topic areas in the field of media and communications.

ULO3: engage in innovative learning through class participation and group project design and presentation.

ULO4: consider and evaluate discipline-based skills and knowledge in relation to career pathways.

ULO5: apply disciplinary approaches and methods in order to understanding global, networked and informational social systems.
