Unit description

Negotiation involves influencing how people think, perceive, feel and behave. We apply these skills in every interaction, whether in the business environment, with our family, or in the world of international politics. The path to improving our negotiation performance involves adopting a mindset conducive for negotiations, learning theories, and developing skills in executing the right behaviour at the right time. This subject will increase students' awareness of the complex dynamics in human interaction and decision-making. The subject will draw on multiple disciplines in order to provide students with key theories and frameworks for managing that complexity. Students will also build practical skills in preparing for, conducting, and reviewing negotiations.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Analyse and critique contemporary theories and frameworks in negotiation.

ULO2: Critically reflect on how assumptions, values, cognitive heuristics and cultural bias impact on negotiation sub processes such as decision making, goal setting, evaluating negotiated outcomes.

ULO3: Apply sophisticated problem-solving and collaboration skills in business and workplace negotiations to enable value creation and then evaluate negotiation outcomes and processes, both as an individual and as a group.

ULO4: Apply stakeholder mapping processes to identify and realize the potential value, risks and likely consequences for all parties in a negotiation ecosystem.

Assessment Tasks
