Unit description

Social research is critical for evidence based policy making. This unit canvasses the use of qualitative research to inform public and social policy. Students will develop skills in conducting qualitative research and how it contributes to policy processes. This includes designing and conducting qualitative research and working with existing qualitative data to develop policy. The course will be structured around four modules. The first examines qualitative research designs for policy. The second introduces students to qualitative research methods and analysis, including qualitative analysis of policy documents. The third applies this knowledge to policy processes, including finding and using existing qualitative data sets; qualitative research as consultation; and the uses and misuses of citizen perspectives in policy processes. The unit concludes by considering how qualitative and quantitative data can be combined as policy evidence. Throughout, the unit will include expert speakers from the non-profit, government and academic sectors to provide insider perspectives on the use of qualitative data for policy making and to discuss the politics of research utilization. By undertaking this course, students will develop advanced skills in undertaking qualitative research and be able to apply these skills in a range of policy settings.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Understand the nature of qualitative research procedures, what makes them distinctive and how they can be used to inform policy development.

ULO2: Understand and practically apply qualitative strategies of inquiry, research methods and data analysis techniques.

ULO3: Develop a critical appreciation of the ethical dimensions of research practice.

ULO4: Obtain first-hand experience in using qualitative research techniques to examine policy issues and problems.

ULO5: Develop a critical appreciation of the politics of research utilization in different policy contexts.

ULO6: Obtain skills in critically evaluating the robustness of different forms of data.

ULO7: Be able to combine qualitative and quantitative data as sources of evidence for policy.

Assessment Tasks

Name	Weighting	Hurdle	Due
Research Design/Consultation Exercise	30%	No	End of Week 6 (Sept 6)
Policy Research Presentation	20%	No	Weeks 12 and 13
Policy Research Report	40%	No	Week 14 (Nov 15)
Participation	10%	No	Ongoing

Research Design/Consultation Exercise

Assessment Type ¹: Design Task

Indicative Time on Task ²: 30 hours

Due: End of Week 6 (Sept 6)

Weighting: 30%

Students will be required to develop a consultation strategy utilising qualitative research methods. The consultation strategy will outline the policy area or topic upon which consultation will occur; provide an overview of the consultation participants (the sample); outline the overall consultation strategy (research design); describe how information will be obtained from research participants (fieldwork and methods); and describe how the data obtained will be used to provide evidence to inform the policy topic (data analysis).

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Understand the nature of qualitative research procedures, what makes them distinctive and how they can be used to inform policy development.
- Understand and practically apply qualitative strategies of inquiry, research methods and data analysis techniques.
- Develop a critical appreciation of the ethical dimensions of research practice.
- Develop a critical appreciation of the politics of research utilization in different policy contexts.

Policy Research Presentation

Assessment Type ¹: Presentation

Indicative Time on Task ²: 10 hours

Due: Weeks 12 and 13

Weighting: 20%

An important skill in social research is the ability to present research in an engaging manner. This assessment task provides an opportunity to develop these presentation skills for social research. Students will give a 10-15 minute presentation (online students will do a virtual presentation) on their policy research, focusing on the themes identified from the analysis and recommendations. These presentations will be undertaken as virtual presentations during weeks 12 and 13.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Develop a critical appreciation of the ethical dimensions of research practice.
- Develop a critical appreciation of the politics of research utilization in different policy contexts.
- Obtain skills in critically evaluating the robustness of different forms of data.

Policy Research Report

Assessment Type ¹: Qualitative analysis task

Indicative Time on Task ²: 35 hours

Due: Week 14 (Nov 15)

Weighting: 40%

Students will analyse a pre-existing corpus of qualitative data to write a report on a policy topic, in the form of a discussion paper/policy briefing. In addition, students will be required to identify and integrate relevant quantitative data to provide context information for the report. The report will require students to undertake qualitative data analysis and develop recommendations based on this analysis.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Understand and practically apply qualitative strategies of inquiry, research methods and data analysis techniques.
- Obtain first-hand experience in using qualitative research techniques to examine policy issues and problems.
- Develop a critical appreciation of the politics of research utilization in different policy contexts.
- Obtain skills in critically evaluating the robustness of different forms of data.
- Be able to combine qualitative and quantitative data as sources of evidence for policy.

Participation

Assessment Type ¹: Participatory task

Indicative Time on Task ²: 10 hours

Due: Ongoing

Weighting: 10%

Throughout the semester students will undertake tasks to develop their qualitative research skills. These will be undertaken outside class and discussed during the weekly online seminars. These include exercises relating to research design, ethics, practicing qualitative methods and data analysis. For External and OUA students, discussion of these activities will be the topics for the weekly discussion forums.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Understand the nature of qualitative research procedures, what makes them distinctive and how they can be used to inform policy development.
- Understand and practically apply qualitative strategies of inquiry, research methods and data analysis techniques.
- Develop a critical appreciation of the ethical dimensions of research practice.
- Obtain first-hand experience in using qualitative research techniques to examine policy issues and problems.
- Obtain skills in critically evaluating the robustness of different forms of data.

- the academic teaching staff in your unit for guidance in understanding or completing this type of assessment
- the Writing Centre for academic skills support.

² Indicative time-on-task is an estimate of the time required for completion of the assessment task and is subject to individual variation

Delivery and Resources

The teaching program consists of the following:

- The course will be run as a series of weekly seminars combining both lecture content and applied exercises. The lecture components provide students with the knowledge base essential for undertaking qualitative research for policy. The practical tasks embed this knowledge and assist students to develop their qualitative research skills. These include exercises relating to research design, ethics, the practice of various qualitative methods, data analysis and interpretation and writing for policy. These will be undertaken in class.
- Subject to COVID-19 requirements to minimise face-to-face exposure, lectures may be pre-recorded and made available online. In this case, students will be required to watch the lecture material prior to attending the seminar.
- The seminar material will be structured around several modules. The first examines qualitative research design for policy-making. The second introduces students to qualitative strategies of inquiry, research methods and qualitative analysis strategies including analysing policy documents using qualitative analysis techniques. The third applies these foundations of qualitative research to policy processes, including finding and using existing qualitative data sets; qualitative research as consultation; and the uses and misuses of citizen perspectives in policy processes.
- The final weeks of the course will be devoted to student presentations. The major assignment for the unit involves a research report based on analysis of transcripts and/or submissions to an existing policy inquiry. As the presentation of research is a key policy skill, students will also be required to present some of their analysis and recommendations in class. See the assignments for further details.
- As this is a skills-based unit, attendance and active participation in the seminars is a minimum expectation.
- Students will be required to read a series of set texts on a weekly basis that relate to the topic for that week. Weekly readings are available via the Leganto link in the SOCI8035 iLearn site.

- Related reading and research development tasks over the course of the unit.

Unit Schedule

Week	Topic	Seminar Activity
One	Introduction to Qualitative Research	Introductions Thinking like a qualitative researcher
Two	The use of qualitative research and evidence in policy processes	Assessing what is quality in qualitative research
Three	Qualitative Research Design	Developing a qualitative research design
Four	Consultations as Qualitative Research Strategy	Designing a consultation strategy Consultation assignment
Five	Research Ethics	Managing ethical dilemmas
Six	Observation / Using Existing Sources	Undertaking an observation Locating qualitative data
Consultation Exercise Due – September 6
Seven	Qualitative Interviewing	Developing an interview protocol Undertaking an in-depth interview
Eight	Focus Groups	Conducting and assessing focus groups
Nine	Action Research	Designing a campaign
Ten	Introduction to Qualitative Analysis	Open coding Identifying categories
Eleven	Writing Qualitative Research	Developing Themes Writing qualitative research
Twelve	Research Utilisation and Dissemination	Communicating research findings
Thirteen	Policy Research Presentations
Policy Research Report Due - November 15
