Unit description

Contemporary organisations both large and small are confronted with dramatic changes in their environment – government intervention, globalisation and increased competition, workplace diversity, population trends, evolving social standards and the search for talent. To effectively adapt to these changes, organisations need well-designed and well-executed Human Resource Management (HRM) policies which enable them to attract, develop, reward, motivate and retain a stable core of high-performing employees. This subject explores contemporary human resource management within this environment. Students will learn the foundation theories of strategic HRM and they will then learn to evaluate and implement these policies and practices into their organisations. Case-based and practical learning is a feature of this course.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Identify and describe key theories and issues in strategic human resource management (HRM).

ULO2: Critique an organisation's HRM policies and practices and design HRM processes to drive improved outcomes.

ULO3: Evaluate and implement HR policies that are aligned with organisation strategy.
