Unit description

An advanced understanding of the speech production mechanism is integral to all aspects of phonetic and phonological theory. In this unit students will explore complex theoretical issues in speech production via a program of targeted readings, the collection, analysis and interpretation of complex data from a range of sources which may include electropalatography, electroarticulography, ultrasound, electrolaryngography, or oral/nasal airflow.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Demonstrate coherent and advanced knowledge of principles and concepts of articulatory phonetics and phonology

ULO2: Evaluate, appraise and critique existing literature in select areas of articulatory phonetics and phonology to arrive at reasoned and meaningful arguments and positions enabling ideas to be applied to novel contexts

ULO3: Explain various processes and methodologies that are integral to advanced research in articulatory phonetics and phonology

ULO4: Demonstrate the ability to apply accumulated knowledge and skills in the context of scholarship in articulatory phonetics and phonology

ULO5: Develop a high level of oral, written, and technical communication skills in the area of articulatory phonetics and phonology
