Unit description

This unit will explore and examine the nature and structure of human thinking, reasoning and decision making, in other words how human beings process information and utilise it to meet the demands of their lives. The unit will cover a diverse range of theoretical, empirical and social questions ranging across domains such as financial, scientific, medical, personal, military, aviation, forensics.

Important Academic Dates

Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at <https://www.mq.edu.au/study/calendar-of-dates>

Learning Outcomes

On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Critically evaluate empirically based research articles.

ULO2: Critique the central assumptions of the major approaches to the study of human thinking, reasoning and decision-making.

ULO3: Collaboratively develop and verbally communicate an integrative critique of a topic area by group preparation and presentation.

ULO4: Describe and critique the Dual (Multi) Process models of human thinking, reasoning and deciding.

ULO5: Review the psychosocial impact of artificial intelligence with respect to human decision making.

General Assessment Information

Essay: Students may answer either one of two questions provided to the class or students may propose their own essay question [provided it is NOT closely related to their Honours thesis] but this must be approved by the Unit convenor before the mid semester break.

Group Presentation: You will be allocated to small groups to prepare and present a 15 min talk in the final week of Semester. You have a week to prepare in Week 8. An individual mark will be applied to all students.

Quizzes: Ten weekly quizzes relating to the content in the weekly lecture and are due the following Tuesday at 5pm.

Additional reading

There may be additional reading for the week uploaded to iLearn.

Classes

Twelve weeks:

- 10 x 2-hour lecture
- 1 x 2-hour group presentations preparation.
- 3 hour seminar for group presentations in Week 12.

Lectures will involve theory and challenge questions. Where applicable, real world case studies will be discussed.

In some weeks, lectures will be delivered via Zoom, so that we can participate in group work. There is an assumption that all students are able to attend these classes to receive maximum benefit. All will be pre recorded and found in Echo.

The only exception to this is Week 13, which will be vacant as there is no set exam in 2020.

Students are expected to complete readings prior to attending the lecture, and they are expected to participate in class discussions.

Unit Schedule
