Unit description

In this unit a choice of seminars may be offered, each specialising in a particular area of interest in the Department of Earth and Environmental Sciences. The areas of interest are based upon individual staff and/or student interest. Intended seminar offers are advertised within the department, and offers are formalised during the enrolment period. Students are asked to note that University Regulations state that no unit taken under the same code number can be counted more than once for credit towards a degree; accordingly they must take care to select the most appropriate of the topics on offer. Students wishing to enrol in this unit are required to check with advisers about topics on offer prior to enrolling.
