Unit description
This unit introduces a model of language useful for language teaching contexts in which learners are faced with a variety of language demands. It explores the social and cultural underpinnings of language, introducing key concepts such as: the relations between text and context, language in context, text structure, the multi-functionality of language, clause-level and text-level grammar, spoken and written English, phonology and graphology. There is a strong emphasis on applying these concepts to second and foreign language teaching and learning.

Important Academic Dates
Information about important academic dates including deadlines for withdrawing from units are available at https://students.mq.edu.au/important-dates

Learning Outcomes
On successful completion of this unit, you will be able to:

ULO1: Apply the foundation knowledge of linguistics for language teaching to analyse English language learners’ language performance.
ULO2: Demonstrate knowledge of the phonology and graphology of English by applying it to English language learning and teaching programs.
ULO3: Recognise and differentiate a range of text types and their linguistic features through systematic analyses of authentic texts from a range of everyday and English language learning texts.

ULO4: Demonstrate knowledge of the units of grammar of English and the relationship between grammar and vocabulary through a range of text analyses.

ULO5: Recognise and understand the differences between spoken and written language to build students’ awareness of appropriate language use in different contexts across different modes of communication.

Language diary

- Assessment Type: Case study/analysis
- Indicative Time on Task: 20 hours
- Due: 22 August
- Weighting: 20%

The purpose of this task is: • to consider the relationship between language and the social contexts in which it is used, • to start to identify the kinds of language features that are used in a short, written text and to consider how these relate to the social context and purpose of the text.

Length: 2 pages (using a pro forma supplied)

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Apply the foundation knowledge of linguistics for language teaching to analyse English language learners’ language performance.
- Recognise and differentiate a range of text types and their linguistic features through systematic analyses of authentic texts from a range of everyday and English language learning texts.
- Demonstrate knowledge of the units of grammar of English and the relationship between grammar and vocabulary through a range of text analyses.
- Recognise and understand the differences between spoken and written language to build students’ awareness of appropriate language use in different contexts across different modes of communication.
Analysing text-level features

Assessment Type: Qualitative analysis task
Indicative Time on Task: 40 hours
Due: 10 October
Weighting: 35%

For this task, you will analyse two texts for their overall social purpose, their rhetorical staging, the genre and text types, as well as the language used to realise Field and Tenor. This task requires you to use the grammar that has been covered in Topics 6, 7 and 8. The first text is the transcript of a dialogue taken from a course book from AMES. For this text, identify the main “chunk” that constitutes a spoken genre. The second text is a letter from a school principal to parents. Length: 4-5 pages using a proforma table supplied.

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Apply the foundation knowledge of linguistics for language teaching to analyse English language learners’ language performance.
- Recognise and differentiate a range of text types and their linguistic features through systematic analyses of authentic texts from a range of everyday and English language learning texts.
- Demonstrate knowledge of the units of grammar of English and the relationship between grammar and vocabulary through a range of text analyses.
- Recognise and understand the differences between spoken and written language to build students’ awareness of appropriate language use in different contexts across different modes of communication.

Analysing a learner text

Assessment Type: Report
Indicative Time on Task: 40 hours
Due: 7 November
Weighting: 45%

This final task requires you to analyse in more detail the linguistic features of a text in relation to its social context and purpose, and then consider what areas of language would best be focused on for this learner. For this task you will analyse a learner text written by a language student in the classroom. Chose ONE text to analyse. One is a younger learner (primary school age) and one is an adult learner (adult migrant). Length: 2,000 words

On successful completion you will be able to:

- Apply the foundation knowledge of linguistics for language teaching to analyse English language learners’ language performance.
• Demonstrate knowledge of the phonology and graphology of English by applying it to English language learning and teaching programs.

• Recognise and differentiate a range of text types and their linguistic features through systematic analyses of authentic texts from a range of everyday and English language learning texts.

• Demonstrate knowledge of the units of grammar of English and the relationship between grammar and vocabulary through a range of text analyses.

• Recognise and understand the differences between spoken and written language to build students' awareness of appropriate language use in different contexts across different modes of communication.

1 If you need help with your assignment, please contact:

• the academic teaching staff in your unit for guidance in understanding or completing this type of assessment

• the Learning Skills Unit for academic skills support.

2 Indicative time-on-task is an estimate of the time required for completion of the assessment task and is subject to individual variation

Delivery and Resources

In the case of on campus classes being suspended due to COVID 19, online seminars using teleconferencing (e.g. Zoom) will run at the usual class time and day.
